Rains kill 12

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Continuing torrential rains left at least 12 persons dead in Colombia and Venezuela Saturday, drove thousands from their homes and caused millions of dollars in losses to crops and livestock.

The Colombian national emergency council met in Bogota Saturday to coordinate relief for the victims but communications in the stricken areas were difficult because of road washouts. The Colombian weather bureau predicted no letup in the rains until next month.

Talks resume today

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Contract talks between negotiators for Caterpillar Tractor Co. and the striking United Auto Workers union were scheduled to resume Sunday, a Caterpillar spokesman said Saturday.

Caterpillar's 33,000 UAW employees in five states went on strike at noon Thursday a day after talks recessed on a new work contract. Sunday's talks will be the first on a national contract since the strike began.

Ford no rubber stamp

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gerald R. Ford puffs on his pipe as he testifies at the second day hearings by the House Judiciary Committee Friday on his nomination to be vice president. Ford said he would not be a "rubber stamp" vice president and would press his position on administration programs no matter if they conflicted with President Nixon's view.

Muskie asks end

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, said Friday the American people "demand and deserve" an end to the Watergate drama and that impeachment was a means of resolving it. The former vice presidential candidate stopped short of calling for impeachment in a speech at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas, following a news conference at the Tropicana Hotel.

6 feared dead on freighter

DOVER, England (UPI) — Six persons were feared dead Saturday in a fire aboard a West German freighter in the English Channel.

Firemen boarded the 10,000-ton Cap San Antonio, registered in Hamburg, after it was towed to Dover harbor but the ship was still on fire Saturday afternoon, making a search aboard the vessel difficult.

Youth suspect in fire

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An Arizona youth with a record of arson in his home state became the "prime suspect" Saturday in the tragic Stratford Hotel fire which claimed a record 24 lives and injured 52 persons early Friday.

Hours after flames swept through the 66-year-old hotel in central Los Angeles police picked up 18-year-old Michael Altenburg while he slept on a bus bench near a freeway onramp on the city's west side.

Soon after, Altenburg, of Tucson, Ariz., had been booked on suspicion of homicide. Police declined to say Saturday whether the suspect had been given a polygraph test.

Two hurt in TF

TWIN FALLS — Two persons were listed in fair condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Saturday night following a three-car chain reaction accident at South Washington Street and Park Avenue.

City police said four persons were taken to the hospital for examination and treatment of injuries about 4 p.m. Hospitalized and in fair condition were Karina Hovel, 23, Twin Falls, driver, of the second of the three cars and Karla VanAstrand, 26, Twin Falls, driver of the third automobile.

Treated and released were Candy VanAstrand, 7, daughter of the driver and Richard Hovel, 28, Twin Falls, husband of the second driver.

Baker speaks in TF

By DAVID ESPO

Times-News Capitol Bureau

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said in Twin Falls Friday he had put aside his doubts of two or three weeks ago that President Nixon might not "make it" to the end of his term.

But the vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee said the President still needed to make a "full disclosure of every facet and aspect not only of Watergate," but also of related matters.

DECS gives contract

By DAVID ESPO

Times-News Capital Bureau

BOISE — The Department of Environmental and Community Services (DECS) awarded a $10,000 contract for janitorial services at the former tuberculosis hospital in Gooding earlier this month without competitive bidding procedures.

The contract was signed Nov. 8 by representatives of DECS and Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Inc., according to records on file with DECS. It calls for "complete janitorial services" for portions of the former hospital through the end of June, 1974. The cost to the state is $2,476 a month.

Two top DECS officials said the contract was awarded without competitive bidding because such practices are not required in service contracts.

Robert Bushnell, general counsel at DECS, said in Boise there was "no requirement" that service contracts be bid before they are awarded. Milt Klein, deputy administrator for Region V, agreed.

But he also agreed he couldn't "be sure" that a better price couldn't have been arranged had the contract been put out for bid.

Maple Valley Rehabilitation Services Inc. was awarded a DECS contract earlier this year for a sheltered workshop at the hospital. The $21,000 contract, one of several the corporation has signed, was for work skill training programs. Among the skills taught are janitorial services, according to DECS officials.

The featured speaker at a fund raising dinner for Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, Baker told a press conference earlier in the day the president "should not resign. I don't think he will be impeached, and I think he's got to do more than he has" in making a disclosure.

Baker said the President was moving toward his "natural power base" in meeting with Republicans and congressmen in the past week.

He discounted the meetings as a possible form of "jury-tampering" in the event the Senate is convened as a court in an impeachment trial.

For the 500 guests at the $10 a plate dinner for Hansen, Baker predicted the Republican Party would recover from Watergate to win significant victories in the 1974 off-year elections. "The Republican Party is alive and well and riding in the catbird seat," declared the first Republican senator ever popularly elected in Tennessee.

Baker told a press conference at the College of Southern Idaho he still hoped to arrange a meeting between the Watergate committee and the President, either in the Capitol or the White House. He called once again upon the President to "put Watergate tapes" at the committee's disposal, and said the full disclosure the President needed to make was necessary "not only to the courts and the Congress but also to the country."

He also predicted the nation would be "energy-independent" by the beginning of the next decade, that it would be "a little chilly" before the combination of increased domestic oil production and geothermal and nuclear energy made it so.

Speaking at the dinner for Hansen he praised the third-term congressman as the "hardest working, and most diligent, best informed and most participating" member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.

He told the audience Watergate was only a "preamble" for the Republican Party "for something much greater than we've ever known" before."

"Those of us who are Republicans are proud to have undertaken a difficult task and if the Democrats had done the same thing we'd have been a lot better off a long time ago," he said of the Watergate investigation. His remark was a reference of the investigation a decade ago of Bobby Baker, a protege of then vice president Lyndon Johnson.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mission Control sharply criticized the Skylab 3 astronauts Saturday night for trying to hide the fact that pilot William R. Pogue vomited late Friday on his first day in space.

Chief Astronaut Alan B. Shepard, speaking on an open communications line in an unusual move, told the all-roof space station crew, "We think you made a fairly serious error in judgment in not letting us know the report of your condition."

Pogue, mission commander Gerald P. Carr and science pilot Edward G. Gibson earlier reported they felt chiller as they set up house in the big orbiting ship for man's longest space flight.

The crew reported Pogue felt "nauseous," but they did not mention his vomiting.

Red tape finally goes

By BILL LAZARUS

Times-News writer

EDEN — Bureaucracy has finally begun to work for Harry Sirucek.

Sirucek, who along with his wife lived in destitution for a year, received his first Social Security check Nov. 7. He originally applied for Social Security more than a year ago, following a heart attack.

The application was turned down because the doctor who treated Sirucek said his heart condition would not prevent him from working, according to Dave Bochmann, former director of welfare advocacy at the Community Action Agency.

When Sirucek applied for work at the Department of Employment in Twin Falls, he could not be helped. Employment counselor Royal Slotten reported he was "not employable."

Bochmann believed the problem was partly that the Social Security Administration was not considering Sirucek's overall condition, but only his heart.

"They have questions about his heart, but the problem is that he is crippled. He also has a problem with schizophrenia," Bochmann said. Another problem was the slow, impersonal working of the federal bureaucracy.

Bochmann said Sirucek applied for a reconsideration of the denial of Social Security in January, 1973.

After receiving no word on the status of the reconsideration for four months, Sirucek requested an administrative hearing in April, but was told in June that the hearing could not be held until a reconsideration had been made, Bochmann said.

Bochmann said he was told in June by Social Security officials that Sirucek's request for reconsideration had just been sent to Baltimore, Md., for a determination.

After various attempts to speed up the decision, Bochmann said he was informed in September that Social Security wanted more information on Sirucek's heart condition before making a reconsideration of the case.

Virgil Naser, assistant director at the Department of Disability Determinations at the SSA, told the Times-News in September that he was "not at liberty" to talk about Sirucek's (or anyone else's) individual case.

Meanwhile, Sirucek and his wife lived in a shack on $35 a month received from sale of some farmland. Their diet consisted largely of cheap meat and jam.

Sirucek said he had been faring somewhat better since a September Times-News article described his condition, because he started receiving food stamps.

"On Nov. 7 he said he received his first Social Security check — $160 for himself and his wife and another $35 for his two high school aged daughters.

"Right now we still got a few cents left," Sirucek said. He said he put the $160 in the bank until his daughters wanted a station wagon costing $65 dollars, which he bought for them. As for food, Sirucek is still using his last batch of food stamps he received before getting the Social Security check.

"We're just going to have to wait until next month" to see if the Social Security check comes, Sirucek said, regarding his future financial situation.

CSI auditorium use not limited

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho officials have assured Civic Auditorium and Fine Arts Center Advisory Committee members there is no plan to limit or eliminate community use of the Fine Arts Auditorium.

Meeting earlier this month, the two community organizations expressed fear community use of the auditorium would eventually be eliminated by a growing demand for the facility in regular CSI activities.

Dr. James Taylor, college president, said the auditorium will continue to be available for community use "at large." He also quoted figures showing about half of the auditorium use is in the interest of the general public.

He said in 1971 46 per cent of the time the auditorium was in use it was for public functions; 62 per cent of the time in 1972 and thus far this year the figure is 48 per cent for public use.

In addition the groups discussed the cost of the auditorium which some of the 1,200 donors who contributed money to build the facility, any is prohibitive to some donating groups.

Council members to review bids

TWIN FALLS — City Council members will review bids for the proposed new fire station during regular council sessions Monday night and will also consider a proclamation on conservation of fuels.

The council meets at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the city hall auditorium. Meetings are open to the public.

Also on the agenda for Monday night are an annexation ordinance and another to grant conditional use for the construction of a mobile home park near the new K mart shopping facility. The proposal is from Arlie White. This will be the third and final reading of the ordinance.

Council members will also consider amending rental fees at the airport and will hear a proposed resolution on secondary sewage treatment for the city and consider an ordinance for the creation of Local Improvement District 88.

Other routine business including deferral of curb cut regulations for Swift and Co., will also be heard.

Appointed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Republican Rep. Steve Symms, has been appointed to the House Interior Committee.

Symms also serves on the House Agriculture Committee. He was appointed to the Interior Committee to replace the late congressman John P. Saylor, of Pennsylvania.

Road information service available

BOISE — The Idaho Department of Highways began its annual daily official winter road reporting service Thursday.

The road information coordinator at Boise will call each of the six District highway offices and have the reports telephone tape recorded by 8:30 a.m. to provide statewide road condition information to the public and the news media.

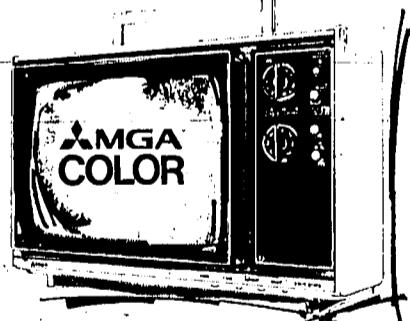

The information is updated again at 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Travelers may obtain current road condition information by calling the following numbers, some of which are taped telephone recordings: Boise — 384-2500 (recorded); Coeur d'Alene — 644-8181; Lewiston — 746-1346; Shoshone — 888-2411; Pocatello — 233-6724 (recorded); and Rigby — 745-7278 (recorded).

Where recorders are used, motorists may also call the Public Information Office at Boise, or the District office numbers listed in the local telephone book for more detailed information on specific routes.

Wing damaged

DENVER (UPI) — Rubber thrown up from a tire which blew out while a United Airlines jetliner with 96 passengers aboard was taking off Saturday, tore a hole in the wing. The plane returned to Denver Stapleton International Airport safely and no injuries were reported.

Airline officials said a blowout on one of the main landing gear tires hurled rubber into the right wing, tearing an 18-inch hole in the metal skin.

PILGRIMS WOULDN'T UNDERSTAND MODERN FOOD PROBLEMS

It's doubtful the Pilgrims would want to tangle with 1973 food problems. They had enough trouble just finding enough food to keep themselves alive through one winter.

Today, America's farmers are not only feeding over 200 million of their countrymen but millions of Russians, Chinese and Japanese as well. Each farmer in this country today is producing enough food for himself and 51 other Americans.

To be fair to the Pilgrims it should be noted that they had to grow or hunt for all their food, and make their clothing and shelter. The Indians didn't have supermarkets waiting for them on the New England coast in 1620.

The Pilgrims were their own farmers, bakers, millers and cooks, they had food to eat that first Thanksgiving because they worked hard for it.

Things are a little different today. Americans let 4.6 per cent of our population raise all the food for the other 95.4 per cent. In fact, so few Americans are farmers today that many know very little about where their food comes from. They only know that it's always at the grocery store.

Take milk as an example, a good cow costs $1,000 or more. Someone has to feed and care for that cow every day of the year. And, how many people in America today ever think about how good the hay crop is going to be? But in every glass of milk and in every steak there's a lot of hay some farmer worked hard and spent money to harvest and preserve for cattle feed.

That turkey stuffing is made from bread which is baked with flour made from wheat. But few sitting around the Thanksgiving table this year will stop to think about how that wheat was harvested. The truth is, a farmer somewhere paid about $20,000 for a combine capable of harvesting enough wheat in just one hour to make 20,000 loaves of bread.

We have weather problems today, too. We lost more farm crops in floods last year than Miles Standish could have stored in a thousand Mayflowers. Crops a farmer invested in but received nothing in return. And the Pilgrims didn't have to worry about overloaded transportation systems, worldwide crop failures and consumer preference for choice and prime cuts.

The American farmer has worked under these conditions for many years—almost unnoticed. So well has he done his job that often in the past he produced too much and paid for it in low prices. Last year, however, crop failures, foreign grain sales, bad weather and inflation combined to use up the surpluses stored from other years. So we have gone through a rough year for food prices as a result.

But the U.S. had 60 million acres of farmland that wasn't being farmed because farmers had been growing too much. This year a lot of that land has been planted in crops and even more will be cultivated next year.

The Pilgrims didn't know anything about our kind of food problems and we can be thankful most Americans don't know anything about the kind of suffering the new settlers experienced that first winter in this land.

Sen. Baker

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., the vice-chairman of the Watergate Committee, offered some sound advice for the Republican Party in Twin Falls Friday night.

Baker spoke at a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner in honor of Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho which attracted more than 500 people. Sandwiched in among praises for Hansen and other Idahoans and pep talk about Republicans and other Americans, Baker gave this assessment:

— Watergate troubles are serious, but not insuperable.

— The Republican Party was not directly involved in Watergate and should not be blamed through guilt by association. Americans, he said, will not blame the party for Watergate.

— Republicans must not ignore Watergate and other crimes, but press forward with appropriate investigations. In this vein he demanded "full disclosure" by the President of suppressed evidence.

— And Republicans must move beyond Watergate to try to forge a new coalition to offer national leadership.

In his speech and press conference, Baker said the impact of Watergate was so great that only two weeks ago he personally believed the Nixon administration could not survive.

Now, encouraged by assurances from the President that Watergate evidence will be taken to the people openly, Baker believes "We'll make it."

But he warned that should the President refuse to be forthright with the people, the situation would again become "very grim" for the President.

Republicans, he said, are tempted to try to ignore Watergate. To do so, he said, would be a disservice to the principles of the Republican Party.

Instead, Republicans themselves must proceed to the bottom of the Watergate matter once and for all. This must take place before the party can again move beyond the Watergate crisis.

Baker sees the Republican Party as a going concern, provided it does not shirk the difficult task of reestablishing governmental integrity. He is correct in believing the party is greater than any one of its members.

Seated press

There is a custom among members of the working press that few people understand. Friday night the custom led to a few grumbles at the Twin Falls banquet at which Sen. Howard Baker spoke in honor of Rep. Orval Hansen.

Some people in the audience noticed that members of the working press did not applaud or stand during standing ovations for Hansen or Baker. The reporters' action was mistakenly viewed as rudeness.

A brief explanation should be helpful.

A reporter's role, unlike that of the audience, is to report what is happening, not to express his personal responses to those events.

So a reporter who personally may be a strong supporter of Rep. Hansen would be obligated professionally to refrain from applause during the congressman's introduction or during his remarks. However, once the reporter is "off duty" he may express himself as would any other member of the audience.

Sen. Baker, Rep. Hansen and other elected officials who regularly deal with the press understand the custom and take no offense.

The underlying reason for the custom is that most readers demand unadorned news stories which tell what happened, not reporters' opinions about what happened. When a reporter puts his own biases into a news story people have good reason to complain of "slanted" coverage.

Working journalists are human beings, and like other people have their personal opinions. But one of the requirements of their profession is to keep their opinions to themselves.

People who want "straight" news reporting should be upset only when working reporters begin to express their opinions on the job and in their news stories.

Talks assure Congressmen of Nixon's stability

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Nixon took a chance when he invited the senators and representatives to the White House to question him about Watergate, but he has made some progress. In these strange and unpredictable efforts to restore confidence in his battered administration.

The chance he took was fairly obvious. The Congress was beginning the long and delicate procedure of impeachment. In this process, burglaries or the cover-up, and offered to hand over all documents relevant to criminal action by his associates, but what was more important about these confrontations, was that the President apparently removed many serious doubts about his own personal control of himself and his problem.

This, more than anything else, has been the concealed anxiety of congressional leaders.

For weeks and even months, the President seemed to be isolated and defiant, brooding with his staff, and roving to his retreats in the Maryland mountains, Florida, or California.

Then suddenly he would appear to brief the leaders of Congress on the latest potential disaster. Two incidents illustrate the problem. When he called the Congressional leaders to the White House to explain why he had called a worldwide alert of the armed forces at the critical point in the Middle East Crisis, he was composed, solemn, and factual.

Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts, the Democratic Majority Leader of the House, was so impressed by the President's presentation of the Soviet threat to intervene in the Middle East that when he got back to the House and found members saying the whole thing was a phony diversion from Watergate, he took to the floor and rebuked members of his own party.

The Congressional leaders were puzzled by this performance, and all the more puzzled when they got back to their offices and were greeted by special messengers bearing a letter from Vice President Agnew saying that, by the time they received this, Agnew would have resigned and thanked them for their past support and courtesy. So why was the President so jolly, since he must have known what was coming?

This is the sort of thing that has been worrying people around here rather than the specific facts about whether the President knew about the burglaries or the cover-ups. And he is in better shape now with the people on Capitol Hill because he has come out of isolation, submitted to questioning, and handled the questions calmly and candidly.

More important, he has handled himself under most difficult circumstances in a cool, and rational manner. He hasn't offered any new information, or dealt with the substance of the charges.

He hasn't answered the charges about Watergate, but he has reassured a lot of people about himself.

This has clearly helped him personally and minimized the deep, but publicly unpopular doubts about his health, judgment and stability.

Also, he has done so well in these confrontations with the Congress that he is now going sled-length the other way into speeches all over the place, or at least all over the South, flying to Florida to talk to the Associated Press. Managing Editors, flying back to his place in Key Biscayne, and then up again and down again to Macon, Ga., back to Key Biscayne, and finally to Memphis to meet with the Republican governors.

Keeping up with him is a puzzle, and who runs the government meanwhile, is not clear; but you can't blame a man for trying to save his honor and his life, and this is now obviously what he's trying, and trying with some success, to do.

members of the House of Representatives would, in effect, a grand jury, deciding whether to indict him for high crimes and misdemeanors, and members of the Senate were potential judges.

Therefore, inviting them to the White House to talk things over was a little dicey, for in a way he risked the charge that he was not only refusing to meet in private with the Senate Watergate Committee members who had studied the evidence, but that he was actually lobbying the jurors from the house and the judges from the Senate.

So far the evidence is that he has dealt with this problem very well. He started poorly by talking to the first delegation from the Hill about the Middle East.

This seemed to some to be a diversion, if not a filibuster, but by the time the first Senators called on him, he seemed more confident and relaxed.

He took them up to the lovely sunny California Room in the White House, he greeted them individually by name, and showed them his hi-fi console, and even said that when he used it, he preferred "tapes," because they were more audible and accurate.

Barry Goldwater, who comes out of this whole mess with more sanity and even humor than anybody else, helped ease the tension in the Senatorial delegation by giving Nixon a present when it was his turn to shake hands. It was a bottle of Bourbon whisky with the new brand name of "Watergate," and the Senator from Arizona suggested that it might make a man feel better in times of trouble.

Thereafter, Nixon was apparently more at ease. He skipped the preliminary speech about the perils of the Middle East and the self-serving argument that the Allies might lean toward Moscow if he were forced out of office, and went immediately to questions.

Members present agree that he denied all charges of personal involvement in the Treasury asks gas tax

WASHINGTON — Having been turned down by President Nixon five times earlier this year for a 10-cents-a-gallon federal gasoline tax to conserve fuel the Treasury is pushing him hard now for an even bigger tax as an alternative to coupon rationing.

Faced with the Hobson's choice of rationing or tax increases, Mr. Nixon may now reluctantly go along with the Treasury.

But whereas Congress ten months ago might have acquiesced in a gas tax, sentiment today is deeply embedded among Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill. The problem: any impasse with Congress over how to cut gasoline consumption is intolerable in the face of the cut-off of Arab oil.

Thus, at the eleventh hour with the last tanker sailing soon from the Mideast, the Nixon administration still has not made basic policy decisions on conserving energy. What's worse, it has not yet even perfected decision-making machinery.

Nobody is in charge of managing the energy crisis and the President remains characteristically aloof.

Mr. Nixon was similarly aloof last winter when Wall Street investment banker William Simon, freshly installed as Deputy Secretary of the Treasury, proposed an extra 10-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax (in addition to the present 4-cent federal tax).

Although Simon's primary intent was anti-inflationary, he also wanted to conserve fuel in the energy crisis which then seemed so distant to other administration officials.

George Shultz, Secretary of the Treasury, fully concurred. But not Richard M. Nixon, frozen to the doctrine that Americans have reached the upper limits of their tax-paying ability.

In the curiously detached manner of the Nixon White House, there was no personal confrontation between the President and gas-tax proponents. In February, Simon's memorandum for a tax increase went up to the White House.

It came back with presidential disapproval: Simon repeated the exercise in March, April, May and June. Four more times Mr. Nixon said no. Finally, in June, Shultz advised his deputy to desist.

At that point, John Love resigned as governor of Colorado to become Mr. Nixon's energy czar. But though the energy shortage was clearer and the danger of Arab reprisals more imminent, Love adopted no contingency plans.

Only last Sunday did Love recognize the probability of coupon rationing.

Meanwhile, the energy experts assembled at the Treasury by Simon (who have declined to join Love's disjoined operation) have drafted a plan for conserving 2.7 million barrels of oil daily without coupon rationing.

How to force car pools without gasoline rationing? A huge gasoline tax. So the Treasury is now pressing for an extra tax between 20 cents and 30 cents a gallon.

NOVAK

To Shultz and the Treasury's other laissez-faire advocates, this is vastly preferable to installing a semi-permanent rationing bureaucracy. The Treasury would compensate the impact on lower tax brackets by tinkering with other taxes — perhaps lowering the telephone excise, perhaps reducing income tax rates for those earning less than $15,000 a year.

Inside the administration it is believed Mr. Nixon has belatedly come to realize that bitter medicine — higher taxes or rationing — is essential.

But it may be too late, considering the mood on Capitol Hill. Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas, just returned after back surgery, is inclined against higher gas taxes. So is Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, acting as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in Mill's absence.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, top Senate spokesman on energy questions, vigorously prefers rationing over taxes.

Grandfather wishes for baby's future

SCRABBLE, Va. — Dear Douglas: I have been writing columns of grandfatherly wisdom off and on for several years in the form of letters to your older sister Heather, but in the thought that grandfatherly wisdom should be expended sparingly, there not being much of it to begin with, I had not intended to make you a literary figure also.

Yet the fairness doctrine applies. Heather, at three, has everything going for her: She can run like a colt, talk in big words and make herself a sandwich.

She is getting old, Heather is, and until you are 18 and she is 21, she is going to seem positively ancient. Big sisters are that way.

By contrast, beloved grandson, you have very little going for you now: You are ten-tiny-fingers and ten tiny toes, a soft pink tongue, and a pair of awesome lungs.

Your dark Irish eyes are just beginning to focus on the world of 1973, which you entered two months ago, and all of discovery still lies ahead. But you do have this:

With your christening last Sunday, you are now officially and formally a member of the family — a family that embraces a billion brothers, sisters and cousins of every race, color and nationality around the world. Onward, my small Christian soldier, howling as you go!

You were sworn into the Christian brotherhood, renouncing the devil and all his works in a little white-steepled church in Washington, Va.

With space travel and new communications and miracles of medicine and science. These will come. By 2020, when you are my age, you and Heather may be looking forward, matter of fact, to reaching 97 and 100 respectively.

In your late 20s, around the turn of the century, the two of you may be travelling around the world as casually as your mother and father now drive from Williamsburg to Richmond.

I wonder instead about the things that matter. What will you discover about the great families of mankind, the families identified by race and religion and nationality? Will they learn in your lifetime to live at peace with one another?

Will you grow up, Douglas, to a world of love and charity and compassion, a world in which human beings do not seek to hurt, or to kill, or to enslave other families?

Ecclesiastically speaking, you are thus domiciled in Rappahannock County, in the Commonwealth of Virginia, in the United States of America, on the North American continent, on the planet earth, spinning in a galaxy somewhere in the eternity of space.

In the presence of a congregation of 22, mostly aunts and uncles, you, Douglas Stone Kilpatrick, human being, were thereby enrolled.

It is the custom of grandfathers, on such occasions, to wonder what grandsons will do, and what they will find, in the years ahead.

I am not so concerned with material things — with space travel and new communications and miracles of medicine and science. These will come. By 2020, when you are my age, you and Heather may be looking forward, matter of fact, to reaching 97 and 100 respectively.

In your late 20s, around the turn of the century, the two of you may be travelling around the world as casually as your mother and father now drive from Williamsburg to Richmond.

Will you grow up, Douglas, to a world of love and charity and compassion, a world in which human beings do not seek to hurt, or to kill, or to enslave other families?

I hope you will come to love this church and this community and these wooded hills, for such a love, as Burke said, is the first link in the series by which we proceed toward a love to our country, and to mankind. You have "my grandfather, a long and loving way to go."

Your grandfather has read too much history and covered too many wars. Your grandfather gravely doubts that your world in these respects, will be significantly better than this world has ever been.

Is it altogether probable that the hatreds, jealousies and passions of mankind will still be around, and you and Heather, dwelling on an increasingly crowded planet, may not be able to do much about it?

But you can try, Douglas. You can try. That is all any of us can, in any age, in any universe. We can try to live up to the good and godly concepts of the family you have joined. You were born of love.

As you grow older you will know hurt and pain and frustration — of course you will — but you will know love also, and you, will love many things.

I hope you will come to love this church and this community and these wooded hills, for such a love, as Burke said, is the first link in the series by which we proceed toward a love to our country, and to mankind. You have "my grandfather, a long and loving way to go."

No adequate oil until '80

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

(c) New York Times Service
PARIS — Until at least 1980 there will likely be no adequate substitute for Arab oil to power the factories, run the cars and heat the homes of Europeans.

This clear, overwhelming fact is behind some of the difficulties European states face with each other and with the United States as the prospects harden for oil rationing on the continent this winter. The consensus of most energy experts is that so long as the Arabs tighten the valves, Europeans have little alternative but to reduce demand.

This is already happening as the Dutch cut out Sunday driving and the Belgians and Germans consider similar measures. Even the French authorities, who consider themselves in a privileged relationship with the Arab states, are warning that restrictions may be around the corner.

There has been much talk of North Sea oil and gas. Intensive exploration activity over the last 10 years or so has yielded reserves of sizable quantities, which eases the crisis somewhat for Britain, the Netherlands and Norway. But the demand for energy has risen so fast in Europe that even those countries are hard hit by the cutbacks in the Middle East.

Since the 1956 Suez crisis Western European consumption of petroleum has risen by seven times. In 1970 Western Europe imported 11.3 million barrels daily, two-thirds of which comes from the Arab states of the Middle East and North Africa. Normal demand growth had been expected to increase Europe's imports in 1975 to 16 million barrels daily, with an even bigger proportion from Arab sources.

If any single commodity dominates the economies of Western European states, it is petroleum, and there simply is not enough drilled on this continent to meet the demand. Wells in Eastern Austria supply one-third of that country's needs. No other

A Mr. Doyle Symms says "American-born migrant laborers are becoming a thing of the past and the people who are here who could help are on 'relief' or have better all-year jobs." I would like to make these comments.

Maybe, migrant laborers are a thing of the past and maybe, just maybe the American migrant might be staying on "better" all-year jobs, but I resent the implication when the word "relief" is used. Unless Mr. Symms is an expert on "relief" or is a national economist he should stick to growing apples or whatever.

In so far as importing Mexican nationals from Mexico "that can be a real crop saver to the Idaho Farmer" is just a nice way of saying cheap labor.

I am concerned with the allegations supposedly made by Deputy Sheriff Bill Boyer, and to quote his paragraph:

"Even if an accident victim arrives at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital in record time, problems may still arise, the group learned. Boyer said that Gooding doctors will not treat a victim if he is a patient of the Wendell doctors. He said the ambulance has to be sent to Jerome as the victim can be treated by a Wendell physician."

This is NOT the case.

CAA funds use discussed

Editor, Times-News:

Sen. James McClure said of OEO: "Wasting the poor's money hurts the poor most." I wholeheartedly agree. In an address given on May 31 to the Senate, Sen. McClure supported the dismantling of the grossly inefficient Office of Economic Opportunity, citing such telling figures as "a paltry 80 cents return on each 'seed' dollar," 75 per cent of that is government cash, 85 per cent of which has gone to staff salaries and administrative expenses."

Eighty-five per cent having seen the local CAA in action, however, I can believe it. Also speaking before the Senate was Rep. Derwinski of Illinois, who stated, "The Community Action Agencies ate up an unbelievable total of 70 cents of every federal dollar on salaries and overhead. This obviously left only 22 cents for actually fighting the war on poverty."

Rep. Landgrebe of Indiana again quoted, on July 5, '78 per cent salaries and overhead figure.

Rep. Young of Florida gave an example of a case involving forgery and grand larceny by an OEO worker, but the local attorney refused to prosecute on these grounds; "A bunch of incompetents had hired a known criminal with a history of similar activities and put him in a situation where he could continue to commit forgeries; such a situation would only embarrass the government by leading the jury to believe that the people running EOC were stupid and irresponsible."

data relative to the patient. This is done regardless of who might be the patient's physician — whether it be a Gooding physician, or from Wendell, Jerome, or Twin Falls.

The Wendell physicians, upon being called relative to their patients by the Emergency Room nurse, then determine what disposition should be made with their patients — whether they want them brought to their offices in Wendell, whether they want them to be taken to the hospital in Jerome or whether they wish to come to the Gooding County Memorial Hospital and care for their patients (the one physician still being on the staff), or whether they desire the patient to be seen by one of the Gooding physicians for the care of the patient.

This procedure is followed in every case, and no one is turned away, and NO ONE is sent to Jerome until their special intelligence all his own. He has to take impractical advice from his boss, apply it to an unworkable situation, delve through years of experience for a like dilemma, use tools which were designed inefficiently and manufactured improperly by someone who didn't know how to actually use them, and come up with a solution which will delight his bosses' superiors ... with his boss.

And then add to all this some grinning idiot who comes to his house and tells his family, "You need help." Does working man get then practical advice? No.

Workable situations? No. Proper tools? No. Recognition for his work? No. Artist? Hit? He just gets to pay more taxes!!! to pay the salary for guess who? Yes, sir. Rep. Young phrased it very nicely when he stated in his closing remarks; "It is time for this return of perspective, this realization that the American people cannot have their own tax money used against them and against the very Social goals of economic self-help and community harmony that they were supposed to foster.

I applaud the decision of the administration to take a rational management approach for the benefit of the worthwhile programs and the pocket of the American taxpayer."

I shudder to think of guaranteed incomes and the like when a more proper solution would be a return to efficient government coupled with a renewal of individual pride of effort.

It is time to take the pros of President Nixon and weigh them against the cons of the Watergate scandal, of which he has in no way been proven responsible. Nixon was too astute a politician to load the Democrats cannon, and he has tried to curb fiscal irresponsibility on such matters as OEO. You can't judge a fight by one knockdown.

understandable that the Wendell physicians prefer not to travel to both hospitals to see patients each day, but in the case of an accident to one of their patients who arrives at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital on rare occasions, certainly it would not put a strain on their time to come to the Gooding Hospital to care for their patients until they were in a satisfactory condition to be transferred to the hospital of their choice.

This has happened on innumerable occasions. It is true that possibly some of these patients have not been in the best physical condition to be transferred to the Jerome hospital, but it has been the directive from the Wendell physicians themselves that has resulted in their transfer, and not a failure on the part of the emergency room personnel at the Gooding Hospital, nor a failure of treatment given at the local hospital.

Air standards assault feared

By PEG O'HARA
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Environmentalists who worked for years for clean air standards began expressing fear of wholesale assaults on those standards as Congress started rushing through emergency legislation to deal with the energy crisis.

Some also worried that more land would be devastated by strip mining in the rush to replace lost Middle East oil with coal as quickly and cheaply as possible, and that safety concerns would be downplayed in the rush to build nuclear power plants.

President Nixon, in his energy message Nov. 7, called for speeded-up licensing and construction of nuclear plants, including licensing for 18 months without public hearings; exemptions from federal and state air and water quality laws and the National Environmental Protection Act (NEPA); conversion of plants from oil to coal, and "reasonable" standards for strip mining.

As oil shortages forced industry back to burning coal, Congress held hearings on several principal bills: S 2500, the National Energy Emergency Act of 1973, which would set up an emergency rationing program and plans for fuel conservation, require some oil and gas-burning plants to convert to coal and grant them variances from clean air laws; S 2680, which would amend the Clean Air Act of 1970 to permit variances from clean air standards on a case-by-case basis without public hearings or judicial review, and HR 11031, companion bill to S 2500.

Many environmentalists were resigned to a temporary six-month grant of power to the president to permit variances, but warned that broad, long-term exemptions could result in air pollution almost as bad in some areas as it was before passage of the Clean Air Act of 1970.

"There's definitely a panic situation up there (in Congress)," said Jim Conroy, legislative coordinator for Environmental Action Inc. "They're ramming things through committees and they'll be law... It's very alarming. If all these proposals pass, we're in for some bad times."

Brock Evans of the Sierra Club and Barbara Heller of the Environmental Policy Center both characterized proposals for dealing with fuel shortages as "assaults on the Clean Air Act."

"It really isn't necessary to forfeit clean air to have energy," said Heller. "It's possible to have both." But, she added, "people have become so frightened," so governed by their fear of shortages, that Congress is "moving at a frantic pace. Even the dedicated environmentalists (in Congress) are scared," she said.

Other sources expressed hope that breaching of the Clean Air Act would not be as severe as some feared, and that environment-minded members of Congress would stand firm and not yield to panic in the face of the energy crisis. But they admitted the crisis would make the environmentalists' fight harder.

As environmentalists saw it, there were two separate energy crises — the one this winter and the long-term one the United States faces. Concern over the first should not be a reason for panic legislation affecting the second, they felt.

TF writer lists Nixon infractions

Editor, Times-News:

Before some of us get a guilty complex because of the things said about Richard Nixon, I have decided to list the things this man has done to this country.

He has caused an erosion of public confidence in our democratic system.

He instituted in the name of national security a plan which violated civil liberties through domestic political surveillance, espionage, wiretapping, bugging, eavesdropping, opening of mail, and military spying on civilians.

He created a special and personal secret police, answering only to the White House.

He and his subordinates interfered with the freedom of the press, by means of investigations and punitive action. He secretly recorded conversations in his office.

He then sought to deny the evidence on those tapes to the courts.

He has violated the Constitution of the United States and his sworn obligation to see that the laws "be faithfully executed." He has used the office of the Presidency to attempt to put himself above the law.

He has consistently lied to the American people. He has, by his actions and through the actions of his subordinates, for which he has accepted responsibility, brought dishonor on the office of the presidency.

He has used the office of the presidency for personal enrichment. He secretly curtailed the FBI investigation of the Watergate. He involved the CIA in the coverup of the Watergate. He sought to suppress, and for a time did suppress, the facts of the Daniel Ellsberg case.

He interfered with the administration of justice by offering the Judge in the Ellsberg case a directorship of the FBI. He intervened in the antitrust suit against ITT, after that corporation agreed to underwrite $400,000 of the 1972 Republican convention. He I suppose one could go on until space ran out.

Get of Nixon's back? He needs our concern like a rattler needs another set of fangs.

Martial law for Greece

ATHENS (UPI) — President George Papadopoulos decreed martial law throughout Greece Saturday and sent tanks and troops into the ancient streets of Athens to crush remnants of a student rebellion and restore order.

Police said four persons were killed and more than 120 injured in a night of fighting that turned downtown Athens into a battleground. The battle ended when an army tank smashed through the iron gates of Athens polytechnic school, focal point of the student rebellion which started Wednesday, and police started occupying students with wooden stakes and lead pipes.

The military command imposed a 4 p.m. curfew in all towns with more than 5,000 population. Troops and tanks took up positions throughout Athens to discourage any new republic.

Rafts drifting

BRISBANE, Australia (UPI) — Three balsa wood rafts, floating across the Pacific from South America with 12 men of different nationalities and three cats aboard, were edging slowly toward the eastern Australian coast Saturday, a radio message said.

Syd Mojon, an Australian ham radio operator who received the report from Capt. Vital Alvar, leader of the "Huncavellica" expedition, said the rafts were 95 miles northeast of their destination, Mooloolaba, on the southern Queensland coast, on the 176th day of the 8,500-mile voyage.

Kissinger goes in conference

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Undersecretary of State Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger swing into a series of follow-up strategy conferences on his Middle East and China missions Saturday, including a meeting with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

Kissinger scarcely paused after his return to Washington from a 12-day, 10-nation round-the-world diplomatic trip to brief President Nixon, top administration officials and Congress.

He talked by telephone with President Nixon in Key Biscayne, Fla., for 20 minutes Friday evening, breakfasted at the White House with Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, CIA Director William Colby and Kissinger indicated he also intends to give the Israeli ambassador a fill-in on his talks with the leaders of five Arab nations.

6 hurt in Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — At least six persons were injured Saturday in a series of new bomb attacks against bars owned and frequented by Roman Catholics. Police blamed the attacks on Protestant extremists seeking to prevent any mellowing between Northern Ireland's two feuding religious communities.

More than 30 Catholic-owned bars have been bombed in the past 13 days and officers said Protestant extremists appear to be systematically destroying such pubs around Belfast.

In the latest blast Saturday, a bomb was tossed from a passing car without warning into the Glen Inn on a street full of Saturday shoppers in the Belfast suburb of Glengormley, injuring several persons with shattered glass.

Police said five persons were treated for cuts and bruises and one man was hospitalized.

A pre-dawn pub blast injured two other persons in the seaside town of Curriclea, 14 miles east of Belfast.

Sen. Kennedy and son

Kennedy son has surgery, niece married Saturday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a morning of tragedy and muted joy, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., comforted his cancer-stricken son after his right leg was amputated Saturday, and within an hour gave his niece away in marriage to a "chorus" of "Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

Kennedy and his wife, Joan, were waiting when their blond, blue-eyed son, 12-year-old Edward Jr., was wheeled back into his room at Georgetown University Hospital about 10 a.m. after successful, hour-long surgery for removal of his right leg above the knee.

A hospital spokesman said young Teddy, who was diagnosed a week ago as having bone cancer in the lower portion of the leg, was in satisfactory condition. Four hours after the operation, the hospital said he was "making an uneventful recovery."

While his wife remained behind, the distraught senator left the hospital 20 minutes later for Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown, one block from the university campus, for the wedding of Kathleen Kennedy, 22, the oldest of the 11 children of his slain brother, Robert F. Kennedy.

Looking palmed as he tried to smile reassuringly, the senator arrived with the bride in a limousine escorted her up the steps of the red stone church only minutes before the Roman Catholic service was to begin at 11 a.m.

The church was jammed with friends and relatives of the Kennedys and the groom, David Lee Townsend, 25, a long-haired, bearded Harvard doctoral student. Among the wedding guests, whom singer Andy Williams led in a rousing chorus of "Irish Eyes Are Smiling" after the nuptial vows were exchanged, were Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., Boston Mayor Kevin White and Surgeon General. The bride's uncle and McGovern's vice presidential running-mate last year.

The bridesmaids, who wore long dark green velvet gowns, included Caroline Kennedy, 16-year-old daughter of President John F. Kennedy. Her mother, Jackie Onassis, did not attend.

A crowd of 500 well-wishers outside the church cheered when Kennedy and McGovern emerged after the service. Kennedy returned to the hospital and McGovern joined the others at a wedding reception at Hickory Hill, Ethel Kennedy's suburban estate in McLean, Va.

The morning of heavy emotion came just three days before Robert Kennedy, assassinated in Los Angeles in June, 1968, would have celebrated his 48th birthday, and five days before the 10th anniversary of President Kennedy's assassination in Dallas.

The Edward Kennedys and a physician broke the news to young Teddy at midday Friday about the decision to amputate.

The boy was taken into surgery at about 8:30 a.m. Saturday, and was wheeled out at 10 a.m. The hour-long operation was performed by Dr. George Hyatt, chief of orthopedic surgery at the hospital.

A malignant growth discovered in diastatic tests that began Nov. 9 was described as a cartilage tissue tumor, less serious than primary bone cancer.

The National Cancer Institute said the 10-year survival rate for Teddy's form of bone cancer is 69 per cent. Most bone cancers are difficult to cure, it said, because the spreading tumor is usually at an advanced stage when discovered.

Teddy, a seventh grader at St. Albans School for Boys, a private school on the grounds of the Washington Cathedral, has been hospitalized since Tuesday.

He has a sister, Kara Anne, 13, and a brother, Patrick Joseph, 6.

Consumers ask listing of ingredients in food

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of consumers Saturday asked the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to require the listing of all ingredients in foods that are advertised and to warn buyers that products high in added sugar content may be unhealthy.

"At a time when food additives are of concern to many Americans and when Americans are consuming far too much fat, sugar and refined flour, food advertising should be as informative as possible," said Dr. Michael Jacobson, codirector of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, which organized the petition.

"Currently deception is rampant, with manufacturers bragging about taste, or a few selected ingredients, while hiding from the consumer the fact that the product contains large amounts of sugar and fat, as well as artificial colorings, flavorings and preservatives. The FTC has the clear authority to stop such deceptions by issuing several simple guidelines, such as the ones we have suggested."

The petition asked that all print advertising for food list the ingredients in decreasing order of predominance, "in a clear and conspicuous manner."

Broadcast ads, it added, should disclose the presence of preservatives, artificial coloring or artificial flavoring in a similar fashion.

When added sugar, such as sucrose, corn syrup and dextrose, account for 10 per cent or more of the calories in a product, such content should be disclosed in all ads, it said, along with a warning that "eating too much sugar is unhealthy."

'Borrowed' tape player questioned

BOISE (UPI) — A $329.05 tape player "borrowed" by the Department of Environmental and Community Services to meet an emergency has found its way into the office of Administrator James A. Bax.

Howard Jamieson, director of budget and finance for DECS, said the cartridge tape player was "on demonstration and approval."

But a spokesman at Idaho Camera in Boise said the box which enclosed the tape player was thrown away and this would indicate a sale was made in the region.

Jamieson, who signed for the tape player Nov. 1 on what appeared to be a bill to DECS from the camera store, said there has been no transaction between the state and the store. He added that Bax personally is interested in the tape player.

"There are several people who have heard Dr. Bax say he liked the player very much and he would purchase it with his own funds," Jamieson said.

When asked why he, an executive in the department, picked up the player, Jamieson replied: "I don't normally pick up tape recorders."

At first, Jamieson said the machine was picked up by DECS because a similar player had "burned up" at region four's child development center in Boise.

But center director Lee Eisenbarth said when asked about the player, "I don't know anything about it. You caught me cold."

Region Four Administrator Roy Haney said he was not aware of any emergency request for a tape player, but he indicated such equipment is used in the region.

Jamieson said he thinks the tape player left the Len B. Jordan State Office Building, where DECS is headquartered, for about one day and then showed up back in Bax's office. He said he could not document the fact that it went to the child development center.

The statement from the camera shop shows a $40 government discount for a total price of $280. No sales tax was deducted on the statement.

Jamieson said he could not recall who made the "emergency request" to him for the tape player, but he added it was not Bax.

DECS chief said facing senate approval again

BOISE (UPI) — One of Idaho's highest-paid and most controversial state officials may have to face confirmation by the Senate again next year.

James A. Bax, the $32,500 a year administrator of Environmental and Community Services (DECS), was confirmed last February as Director of Environmental Protection and Health (DEPH).

Then the Legislature created a new department — effective last March 31 — from the old DEPH, the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (SRS), and the Youth Training Center (YTC).

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus put Bax in charge of the merged departments. Dr. John Marks, then head of SRS, stayed on for a while as deputy in charge of the area he once ran directly under the governor.

Marks later resigned. This week — in a major breakup — Bax abolished 12 key positions, including those of a deputy administrator and three assistant administrators.

Now, it appears, his own job could be on the line.

In creating DECS the Legislature did not simply transfer the powers and operations of SRS and the YTC to DEPH. Instead it merged these agencies and control of the institution into a new agency.

This law set up the post of administrator of the agency and said he would have certain duties once held by the directors of DEPH and SRS.

NFO can raise the general price level because it is nationally organized and provides a wide collective bargaining base, he said.

"Every time NFO moves production out of low price level because it is pattern everyone tries to meet or beat that price," he said, "raising the general price level."

Staley said, "The NFO moves production out of low price levels because of increased production and cost. Prices are levelled out at the highest acceptable price level."

The NFO tried to get its members to contract cattle ahead while prices were up where they could have served as floor prices, he said, but producers felt prices would increase and would not contract. Then the prices decreased.

"This will happen again with commodity after commodity if all the producers don't join the NFO collective bargaining," he said. "If prices continue their downward trend, then producers will find their profits evaporate overnight."

"The only answer and hope is the NFO collective bargaining," he said.

Earlier in the afternoon the NFO membership adopted a resolution calling for the use of fuel with a mixture of 10 to 25 per cent ethyl alcohol for use in internal combustion engines.

According to the resolution, which will be presented to the Idaho state legislature this term, this mixture has been proven through use in many countries throughout the world and would utilize a great number of agricultural products.

James Archibald, Genesee was re-elected national director of the NFO.

3 directors named

SHOSHONE — Three directors were elected for the Big Wood Canal Co. Board this week at the annual stockholders meeting at the Shoshone office.

Jerry Nance was elected for the district 3 Dietrich area, above the Milner-Gooding canal. He replaces Willard Nelson in the post.

Re-elected were Charles Pendleton, for the Shoshone segregation above the Milner-Gooding canal, and Joe Pavkoe, for the South Gooding segregation.

After the election meeting, a re-organization meeting was held at which Donald Sandy was elected chairman. Charles Mulder, Gooding, is the first vice chairman; Wendell Johnson, second vice chairman, and Mrs. Floyd Silva, secretary-treasurer.

Record set

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Four Brigham Young University students emerged from a campus pool Saturday after treading water for a record 32 hours.

Three coeds and one male student set the mark after 13 others dropped out, 12 of them men.

The victors treading water for 24 hours.

Dave Waterman, head of the BYU athletic office, said the feat would be sent to the Guinness Book of World Records.

"Anything in Guinness we'll go after," said Waterman, "as long as it's within church standards." BYU is owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon).

Nixon eyes rationing

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon Saturday refused to rule out the possibility of gasoline rationing this winter, but said it was his goal to avoid it.

Asked during a televised question-and-answer session if rationing was "imminent," Nixon said he felt the American people would resent it "very, very much" in peacetime without the loyalty and self-defenses pressures of wartime.

"Our goal is to make it not necessary," he said.

DECS breakup will give more local control

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The statewide breakup of the Idaho Department of Environmental and Community Services this week will mean more control and expanded services on the local level, according to DECS Regional Deputy Milton Kline. For starters, $10,000 is being transferred out of the "Boise bureaucracy" to help fund a new mental health program for the department's Region V, which extends from Nevada to North Alturas Lake and from Blits to Massacre Rock, Kline said.

Twelve high paying administrative positions were abolished Wednesday, eliminating $200,000 a year in salaries. Also, 14 other administrative jobs now funded but not filled and 35 more positions which are unfunded and unfilled were cut out, making a potential annual savings of $460,000.

The reorganization will bring better staffing to the regional offices, Kline said. A number of positions in the region are not filled simply because the local DECS has been unable to find qualified persons for them.

Now, with jobs eliminated in Boise, a number of experienced administrators will be taking regional posts.

Kline said the mental health program is something which has already been established in other regions. Up to two years ago Region V had "no overall" mental health program and since then has only been contracting for use of other regions' facilities. Last year only one mental health worker was located in Region V.

The state money probably will provide employment for a full-time staff of four social workers and psychologists and a total staff of 10 to 12 persons, Kline said. If federal staffing grants come through, 20 additional positions will be funded, expanding the

Aide slated

TWIN FALLS — A veteran's service officer will be at the Disabled American Veteran's Hall, located at the corner of Harrison and Shoup streets, one block north of Addison Avenue each Thursday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The service officer will assist veterans and widows with pension cards and any veteran need.

Those unable to meet with the service officer during regular hours should send a card to P. O. Box 884, Twin Falls, setting a convenient time to meet with the service officer.

Communities save fuel

By JAMES R. KING
United Press International

Communities trying to conserve fuel so there will be enough to make it through the winter have reduced garbage pickups, extinguished "star and flame" turned off neon signs, and in one case ordered municipal workers to ride bicycles instead of staff cars to work.

In Tallahassee, Fla., Gov. Rubin Askew repealed a rule prohibiting women from wearing skirts to work Thursday and said because state offices will be cooler during the shortage, female employees will be allowed to wear pants suits to work if they wish.

Los Angeles school officials canceled all field trips to save diesel fuel, and the city's Board of Water and Power Commissioners recommended a five-point program including rotating blackouts in which power would be cut for three-hour periods to zones throughout the city.

Neon signs were turned off on the "glitter gulch" gambling strip in downtown Las Vegas, Nev., and garbage pickups were reduced from five per two weeks to four in Tallahassee. The mayor of Everett, Wash., ordered city workers to ride bicycles instead of staff cars to work when possible, and in Durham, N.C., fines charged to speeders were increased from $10 to $100.

In Indianapolis, Ind., the "eternal flame" at the Indiana American Legion headquarters was extinguished. The move will save only $20 a month, but legion officials said they hoped the symbolic act would encourage conservation.

The energy shortage was not confined to the United States. In Paris, top economic experts from 24 nations met to determine how the fuel shortages and skyrocketing energy prices would affect their economies.

And in Bonn, an economics ministry spokesman and West Germans are ignoring the call to conserve oil products voluntarily and the government might have to decree such measures as Sunday driving bans.

The six New England governors met in Boston and adopted a resolution urging national daylight saving time, and called for a regional 50 mile an hour speed limit. Alabama Gov. George Wallace appointed an energy management board, which recommended consumers form car pools, turn off electrical appliances and use mass transit.

In Washington, U.S. airlines reached agreement with foreign airlines to cut back flights over the North Atlantic. Pan-American, Trans World, and British Overseas Airways Corp. agreed to cut flights between London and Philadelphia and London and Boston.

U.S. domestic airlines already have cut more than 400 flights a day to conserve jet fuel, and more are expected if the fuel shortage worsens.

Won top award

STEPHANIE PARKER, Twin Falls High School senior, shows the scrapbook arranged by her which won first place in state Future Homemakers of America competition this week in Glenna Ferry. She was awarded the silver loving cup at the meet where Karla Nipper, also TFHS, assisted with the conference program as state vice president of public relations.

Japanese ration industrial power

(c) New York Times Service TOKYO — The Japanese government Friday announced an emergency program to ration oil and electric power for industry and appealed to the Japanese public to conserve fuel voluntarily.

Under the government's plan, which will take effect next week, Japanese industries will be required to cut their consumption of oil and electricity by 10 per cent.

Government economists estimate that such rationing will reduce Japan's economic growth over the next few months to zero or possibly even force an actual decline in output. The economists also calculate that as a result, Japan's over-all rate of growth for the current fiscal year will be only 6 per cent instead of the 10 per cent Japan has averaged for more than a decade.

Japan is particularly vulnerable to the fuel problem because she must import virtually all of her oil, and 80 cent of it comes from the Middle East.

Under the government's emergency program, the public will be asked to voluntarily comply with a long list of guidelines to reduce oil and electric power consumption. Some of these steps include limiting the amount of outdoor advertising illumination, keeping room temperature below 60 degrees, reducing highway speeds to 50 miles an hour, and ending post-midnight television programs.

A number of famous people were born on Leap Year day, Feb. 29, including composer Giacchino Rossini, Shaker sect founder Ann Lee, and band leader Jimmy Dorsey.

Perhaps the U.S. government is simulating an earlier than necessary withdrawal here to show the Communists its willingness to leave Laos.

Other fixed-wing aircraft make drops to smaller positions where even the helicopters can't get in.

With the Laos cease-fire now in relatively successful ninth month most of these Air America missions to Meo, Lao and Thai troops are food and equipment resupplied with little ammunition involved, as there is virtually no fighting.

The Air America aircraft area, however, is being shot at by the Communists, particularly at the edge of the Plain of Jars and some have been hit.

The airline is flying now from its base in Udon in Northeast Thailand. Some aircraft and crews remain here overnight. The once big Air America base in Vientiane is closed and this has been the basis for an embassy spokesman's suggestions to newsmen that the line has ceased functioning to all intents and purposes since Oct. 31.

The present Air America operations from Long Tieng are normal post cease-fire operations. They are very necessary if the Thais, Meo and Lao are going to remain in their positions holding the line facing the North Vietnamese 316th and 312th divisions.

McClure's bill seeks disclosure

Sunday, November 18, 1973, Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 13

Times-News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — All candidates for federal office would have to make public their income tax returns under a bill introduced by Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho.

"I personally do not think we should be required to disclose our personal income tax returns," he stated. "Yet if we are to demand it of Congressmen Ford, then we ought to demand it of ourselves as well," he continued.

"We have no right to say to Mr. Ford, 'You have got to be cleaner than the rest of us,'" McClure said.

The bill was introduced in relation to recent suggestions that vice presidential nominee Gerald Ford should present his income tax records as well as other financial statements to the Senate Rules Committee which is acting on his nomination.

"In these times of doubt and distrust in political office holders we cannot afford any action which would advance the theory that some people should be more honest than others," McClure continued.

"If disclosure is a moral issue," he stated, "it must apply to every officeholder. If not, it should remain a voluntary option for all."

He pointed out in his remarks to the Senate that some senators and congressmen had already made such tax return disclosures. "This was an exercise of their right to handle their own finances in their own way, which in no way abrogates the rights of others to make a different choice," McClure maintained.

"In requiring a nominee to make a disclosure—not required by members of the body itself," he added, "we of the Senate would be clearly implying that vice presidents ought to be more moral than senators."

McClure's bill was referred to the Senate Committee on Finance.

CROPS MENACED

LONDON (CNS) — Wheat farmers in New South Wales are said to be facing a critical situation because of spreading crop disease, according to reports here today from the Australian High Commission.

The principal cereal agronomist with the Australian Department of Agriculture, Robert Connell, says in Sydney many farmers were not yet aware of the danger. He was one of a group of experts who have just toured the state's wheat-growing areas.

Bush won't seek Texas post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican National Chairman George Bush announced Friday he has decided to stay in his job rather than run for governor of Texas.

Representative and former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, had been mentioned repeatedly as perhaps the strongest Republican prospect for the governorship next year.

Bush said in a statement: "I have made a final decision. I will remain as chairman of the Republican National Committee. I will not be a candidate for governor of Texas in 1974."

North Dakotabook-burning ends

DRAKE, N.D. (UPI) — Book-burning has come to an end at the public school here, apparently in part because of complaints from all over about the burning of copies of Kurt Vonnegut's novel, "Slaughterhouse Five."

School Superintendent Dale Furtman said Thursday that 32 copies of the book were burned with the trash by a janitor after a sophomore girl complained about what she considered coarse language in the book.

Bruce Severy, who used the novel in his sophomore English class, said copies of James Dickey's "Deliverance" and a book of short stories by Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck and others originally also had been ordered burned, but they will now be spared.

"Publicity had a lot to do with their changing their mind," Severy said.

Furtman said he thinks the book of short stories will be put back into class. He is recommending it, but the final decision is up to the board. There is still a question about what will be done with "Deliverance."

It said students had never been told they could not read any of the books, but "Slaughterhouse Five" was set as required reading because of the profanity.

"Slaughterhouse Five," a strong antiwar statement, describes the Allied firebombing of Dresden, Germany, in World War II, through the eyes of five survivors. Vonnegut, a prisoner of war at the time, was himself a survivor of the real-life bombing.

"I'm glad of the freedom to make soldiers talk the way they do talk," Vonnegut said in an interview about the book burning.

Severy said many students finished reading the books before they turned them back in. "Generally the students are on the side of the books rather than on my side," he said. "I don't think I'm any hero to them."

By JUDY PRISELEY
Times-News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The answer to the undoubtedly dangers of corruption inherent in the present system of public elections is simply the vigilance of the intelligent voter, aided by an alert press and the watchful eye of political opponents," said Rep. Steven Symms, R-Idaho.

Symms' comment was made in response to a charge by Common Cause, a non-partisan citizens' lobby, that the House of Representatives was showing "unreasonable" delay in taking action on a bill that would extend public financing to candidates for federal office.

"The House has made no effort to remedy conditions that caused Watergate," said David Cohen, vice president of Common Cause. The group is supporting the Anderson-Udall bill, introduced in the House in May, to provide restrictions on financial support of political candidates by moneyed individuals and special interests.

"I am sure everyone realizes that deliberate action by the Congress is preferable to rushing into important legislation which will vitally affect this country and its freedoms," Symms continued.

"Present abuses may be replaced with even worse difficulties, for instance, such as a denial of free speech in the varied limitations embodied in this bill," he said.

According to sources, in the House Administration Committee which is considering the Anderson-Udall bill — the only one of its kind in the House — five hearings on the bill have been held with hopes that the bill will shortly be out of committee and headed for action on the floor.

"Watergate was caused by money in large amounts — raised, muscled and extorted — from corporations and individuals with affairs to settle with the government," Cohen charged. He further contended that "responsibility for the failure to enact this bill in this Congress clearly falls on the House Democrats."

Symms, on the other hand, declared that "I believe we must retain our present system, relying on the private financing of elections."

Idaho's other Republican representative, Orval Hansen, replied that he had had no opportunity to study the bill in depth and therefore had no statement at this time.

A spokesman in the office of Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.), a sponsor of the bill, pointed out some of the features of the bill:

— Partial public financing provided for federal elections including primaries, general and runoffs.

— Limitations on the amount of money that can be contributed by individuals, corporations, committees or other special interest groups.

— Curtailing "big money" contributions by providing from federally appropriated funds grants that would match small financial donations.

— Ceilings on the amount of contributions to candidates.

— Federal funding for primary and general elections for the House, Senate and Presidency and for the national party committees would amount to about one dollar per voter per year (or $150,000,000).

— Stipulations would be included for income tax deductions for contributions.

Regarding action on this bill, Common Cause has urged Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio, to resign one of the two positions he presently holds which create a "conflict of interest" in the consideration of the campaign financing bill.

Hays is chairman of the House Administration Committee which is responsible for legislation involving campaign laws — and he is also chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee to raise money for candidates. Hays was not available for comment on this question.

Common Cause noted several advantages of public financing for candidates as follows:

— Money would only go to genuine candidates who had raised money from a broad base of supporters in small contributions, before receiving public financial assistance.

— Voluntary contributions would be small and in checks rather than cash.

Severed ear said
J. Paul Getty's

ROME (UPI) — Police doctors examining a human ear mailed to a Rome newspaper by someone saying he was the kidnaper of J. Paul Getty III said today the ear had been severed by a professional.

They said they were "almost but not 100 per cent" certain that the ear was removed from a living person. They said they would "have a complete analysis on the ear in two or three days."

"It was done professionally," a police doctor said. "The conditions of the organ are fairly good."

"It belonged to a person who was not old and who had some freckles," a police surgeon said. Young Getty, missing for more than four months, was freckled.

The self-styled kidnappers of the 17-year-old grandson of oil magnate J. Paul Getty Wednesday telephoned the boy's mother for the second time in two days, a family lawyer said today.

Gail Harris, mother of the teen-ager, received a telephone call at her Rome apartment from the same man who had called her Tuesday to say that young Getty was "alive and well," lawyer Giovanni Incovoni said.

Incovoni did not disclose the details of the latest call. But on Tuesday Mrs. Harris gave the alleged kidnappers a list of five.

questions which she said only Paul could answer as further proof that he was still alive.

She said the voice at the other end promised to phone her back with the answers.

The alleged kidnappers have demanded $3.4 million ransom — a fee which Mrs. Harris insists she cannot pay. The elder J. Paul Getty has refused to put up the money.

But the note accompanying the ear — and signed the "Kidnappers of J. Paul Getty III" — said the youth's other ear would be severed if the ransom demand is not met.

Federal funds sought

RATHDRUM, Idaho (UPI) — Northern Idaho's Panhandle Planning and Development Council is seeking federal funds to study the impact of a proposed $30-million Burlington Northern classification yard on nearby communities.

The council has applied to the Federal Economic and Development Administrator for a $10,000 grant to conduct a technical assistance study.

Burlington Northern has received permission from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to construct the six-million-dollar facility near the towns of Hauser and Rathdrum.

That action came earlier this week despite protests from local residents, who asked that the yard be built somewhere else.

Union votes strike

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — For the first time in the 29 year history of the J.R. Simplot Fertilizer plant in Pocatello, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union have voted to go on strike.

The strike was called after a meeting Friday where an impasse was declared by Commissioner Jack Garvey of the Federal Mediator and Conciliation Service.

A one-week extension of the contract expired Thursday night.

More than 350 union members work at the fertilizer plant. The strike also will affect approximately 150 construction workers.

Fuel priorities listed

BOISE (UPI) — State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Director Forest Severe says he has been notified that for at least 60 days agricultural pursuits will be given priority for use of diesel fuel.

The Interior Department's office of petroleum allocation made the notification.

A third preference was made for public mass transportation systems.

Highway closed

BOISE (UPI) — Heavy buildup of snow and dangers from avalanches annually force the closure of State Highway 21 from Lowman to Stanley. This year the road will be blocked off beginning at 4 p.m. today.

The Idaho Department of Highways will put up barricades 12 miles east of Lowman and 10 miles northwest of Stanley.

FHA increases support

BOISE (UPI) — Small rural communities soon will have increased federal support to update or develop needed facilities, according to Donald Winder, state director of the Farmers Home Administration programs.

Winder said FHA can make credit available to small rural towns for a wide range of community facilities such as industrial parks, streets, fire fighting equipment, ambulance services, community centers and even for community recreation.

Cheyenne schools close

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — School officials ordered all city schools closed Monday because of an attempted firebombing, apparently racially inspired, of the girl's gym at Cheyenne Central High School on Friday.

Four young blacks threw four one-quarter beer bottles full of flammable liquid into the vestibule of the gym and unsuccessfully tried to ignite the liquid by throwing matches through the doors, police said. The four raced away on foot.

TF doctor faces suit

BOISE (UPI) — A former Twin Falls woman, now living in Salt Lake City, has filed a suit in U.S. District Court charging a doctor with carelessness and negligent diagnosis in the treatment and surgery on her ankle.

Arlene Beaulieu led the action against Dr. Donald Dale Swartling, a Twin Falls specialist in orthopedic surgery.

The suit says the woman in August, 1972, went to Swartling with an ankle problem. After surgery, she contends in the complaint, the ankle got infected and did not heal.

The suit asks for $300,000 general damage, plus medical expenses and other costs.

Boise man sentenced

BOISE (UPI) — A 42-year-old Boise man, Milas Adkins, has been sentenced to eight years in prison for the shooting death last March of Vincent R. Delgado, of Boise.

Originally charged with first degree murder, Adkins pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter. Delgado was killed by several pistol shots, police said at Adkins home. They said a fight preceded the shooting.

Murphy to speak

SHOSHONE — Gov. Jack M. Murphy will be the speaker at the annual chamber of commerce election banquet Dec. 3.

The dinner will be served at the Manhattan Cafe.

Officers of the chamber announced plans for the annual Children's Christmas party set for Dec. 15.

C. M. Wilson said he will make arrangements for a free movie to be shown at the Rex Theatre that afternoon.

The chamber will make arrangements to assist in putting up the Christmas decorations in the city. Lights may not be lighted more than on Christmas Eve, however, in keeping with the move to conserve energy.

McCall station discontinued

BOISE (UPI) — The Union Pacific Railroad has been authorized to discontinue its agency station at McCall.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission ordered that with discontinuance of the agency station at McCall, Union Pacific must maintain a toll-free telephone service between patrons at McCall and the railroad agency at Cascade.

The commission found that all business at the McCall agency could be handled without the services of an agent, by the public using services of Union Pacific's train crew, or the personnel of Union Pacific at the Cascade Agency.

Vandalism probed

FILER — Vandals at the Filer High School which occurred sometime Friday night was being investigated by city police Saturday.

Pierce Clegg, officer, reported no forced entry was made at the building and it appeared nothing was taken. He said someone apparently ran down the hallway where lockers are located and pulled books and papers from a dozen or so open lockers and scattered these about the hallway.

Closed for the winter

SUMMER HOMES in the Stanley basin are well snowed in already and can only be reached by snowmobiles or four-wheel drive vehicles. This cabin at Valley View has been closed for the winter as has most of those in the area.

Speed reduction eyed

BOISE — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus may request the State Board of Highway Directors to reduce the speed limit on the state's highways to 60 miles per hour as a fuel conservation measure.

Andrus has ordered tests conducted by the Department of Highways to determine the rate of gasoline consumption by vehicles traveling at different speeds. The results of the tests are expected to be on Andrus' office today, according to one highway spokesman.

Andrus' request to the highway board may come as early as next week, according to one estimate, but is not expected to request a reduction below 60 miles per hour. President Nixon has asked for a voluntary reduction to 50 miles per hour nationwide.

Nearly a month ago, Andrus announced as part of a series of energy-conserving steps that state vehicles were not to travel faster than 60 miles per hour. At the same time, he asked for the public to limit driving speeds to 60 miles per hour across the state.

He said at the time, "A reduction in the top speed limit reduces gasoline consumption by approximately 20 per cent." But he has since acknowledged that a program of voluntary compliance is not likely to result in a statewide reduction of speed.

The tests conducted by highway department personnel involved cars with pre-measured amounts of gasoline driven at speeds of 70, 60 and 50 miles per hour. They were designed to see how much faster the fuel was consumed at the higher speed than at the lower ones.

Similar tests conducted this month by the Idaho State Automobile Association determined that cars driven at 70 miles an hour travelled 15.7 miles per gallon. At 60 miles an hour the rate of fuel use was 17.5 miles, while at 50 miles an hour gasoline was used at the rate of over 20 miles a gallon.

Andrus, who was out of his office today, is expected to review the state test results early next week before deciding on a recommendation to the highway board.

Parents urged to cooperate

HAILEY — Parental co-operation has been urged during the implementation of changes in Blaine County School District bus routes.

According to Supt. Wayne Fagg, six bus routes have been changed effective Monday to reduce route times and to improve student safety and convenience.

The affected routes include the following buses: Buses 7, 8, 12, 14, 15 and 18. Fagg said students have been given informational sheets on the new proposed bus routes and their bus drivers have discussed the changes.

The superintendent said also generally throughout all the bus routes, the number of stops have been reduced to save time and to cut down on bus wear.

These changes, Fagg said, "include establishment of central collection points in towns and one stop in smaller housing developments and two stops in larger developments."

Damage high

GRAND TETON PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — A damage survey in Grand Teton National Park is continuing, and officials said Friday that as many as 100,000 trees may have been killed in Monday's storm.

"But how do you count trees," said park spokesman Tony Beynleto.

The three-hour storm ripped through the park, tearing down trees, damaging buildings and power lines, and blocking trails and roads. Chief Ranger Frank Betts originally put the number of lost trees at 10,000 — their roots weakened by rains the previous week.

The janitorial contract stipulates the corporation must pay its employees $2 an hour for performing the janitorial functions at the hospital building.

Klein said the State Department of Labor has been asked to go over the contract and had approved the $2 provision.

The contract calls for $13,978 in personnel costs and $5,834 in non-personnel costs.

Both Bushnell and Klein said not all of the money involved would come directly from the state. Some of it is federal money, they said, used to match state funds because it is to maintain space occupied by certain department programs.

According to Klein, the use of federal money results in a savings to the state. He said before the services moved into the building, state funds paid the entire cost of upkeep of the old hospital site.

Under the terms of the contract, the state paid Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, Inc. $5,000 in advance money. Information in the contract file puts the cost of the service at 4.83 cents a square foot per month.

Contract set

he added, any action was left up to the individual shopkeeper.

Gordon said he did not know how many merchants might have sent such a letter. "As a group there was probably sort of a mixed feeling on this thing," he said.

Chamber of commerce president Ray Rostron said he hadn't "heard anything" about shortened hours.

Downtowners' president Bob Gordon, manager of J. C. Penney's, and the merchants discussed President Nixon's energy crisis speech at their last week meeting.

He said the busineesmen discussed sending a letter to Congress or the White House pointing out that uniform store closing hours at shopping centers and stores across the nation would have a significant effect on conservation of fuel, but

TF starts energy saving measures

By BILL LAZARUS

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Turning down the thermostat, shutting off unnecessary lights and easing up on the gas pedal are the energy saving measures being employed by schools, city agencies, state agencies and the hospital here.

More radical and unusual energy conservation methods such as shortening hours of operation or switching to sagebrush for heating fuel apparently are not considered serious alternatives yet.

Monday, Twin Falls Mayor John Christoferson will proclaim fuel conservation guidelines for city agencies and will appeal to local citizens to follow these guidelines, according to City Manager Jean Milar.

Milar said the guidelines will require buildings be kept heated at 68 or 69 degrees Fahrenheit and curtailment of unnecessary trips and carelessness in not leaving idle engines running.

Since city employees rarely take trips for the city outside Twin Falls, reduction of speed does not apply, he said. However, the mayor will call for slow, energy-minded driving, Milar added.

Scott Cunningham at the Idaho Department of Environmental and Community Services here said the department's offices are being heated only to 68 degrees, all lights not in use are being turned off and DECS employees are to drive no faster than 60 miles-per-hour while working in accord with the governor's order.

Soon, he expected the speed limit for DECS employees to be down to the nationally recommended 60 miles-per-hour. Cunningham said from what he knew there had been no talk within DECS of reducing overtime hours.

Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Bill Chaney said the county would not be doing anything special to conserve energy this winter. He said keeping a "tight line" on the use of electricity and heat has always been county policy. As far as setting speed standards — that decision will be left up to individual department heads in the county, he said.

Dist. Supt. George Staudaher said Twin Falls school buildings and offices will be heated to 68 degrees, down from a normal 72. Except for saving fuel, this change has not had much effect: "nobody seems to be complaining," he said. In the areas of transportation and lighting, the district cannot save much energy, Staudaher maintained, because bus routes are fixed and night lights are necessary for security.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital public relations director Mary Goo said temperatures in public rooms and offices in the hospital will be reduced. However, temperatures in the patients' rooms will be "controlled by and for patients." She said the hospital also plans to reduce use of electricity as much as possible.

TF takes inactive role

By GEORGE WILEY

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City is no longer taking an active role in the preparation of the new county zoning ordinance, although City Manager Jean Milar said the city is willing to do so.

In the early stages of preparation of the new county ordinance, Milar said, city officials worked closely with the county zoning board to set up continuity in zoning adjacent to city boundaries.

At a later stage, city engineers presented the county zoning board a map staking out a proposed city-county zone of "joint influence."

According to county zoning administrator Ed Woods, the areas of joint influence would have surrounded each city in the county, not just Twin Falls. Under the joint influence proposal the areas would have been administered by an appeals board composed of two county, two city and one highway district representative.

Woods said the joint influence concept was Redesign coins for $

TWIN FALLS — An "ambitious" nation-wide competition to redesign United States coins in honor of the bi-centennial in 1976 was detailed here Friday by Mary P. Brooks, director of the US Bureau of the Mint.

Brooks said $5,000 will be awarded to each of three winners in the competition for reverse designs for the dollar, half dollar and quarter.

Twelve runners-up will each receive $750 and a grand prize winner will also be named.

Brooks said the program is ambitious because the US has never changed three coins at one time in commemoration of a historic event and the design competition was never open "as wide as we are doing with this one."

When the competition was planned Brooks said she was told she would be "opening a Pandora's box." However, she said, "I feel every citizen of the United States is qualified and should be allowed to enter the competition."

Brooks, Magic Valley native, also said she will be proud if someone from this area wins the competition.

The competition will close Dec. 14 and printed instructions are available at the Times-News office.

The mint intends to strike about 1.6 billion of the quarters, 600-million half dollars and 300 million dollars. Brooks said about 54 million of the coins will also be struck in 40 per cent silver for special issue.

Because the redesigned coins will carry the artist's initials, Brooks said "whoever wins this will truly be immortalized."

Brooks said she feels the competition will promote a study of history and said she feels it will have "a very wholesome effect on the country."

No plans made to shorten store hours was in response to a national effort, not at the request of Idaho Power Co.

Idaho Power southern division manager Earl Haroldson said no requests for cutbacks had been made to Idaho Power customers.

"We expect to have sufficient energy this winter to supply all our customers," he said. "We don't even anticipate having to interrupt our large interruptable customers."

Haroldson said Idaho Power will generate all the power it can from its river installations and any not sold to regular customers will be sold to other utility companies.

Last winter, Haroldson said, Idaho Power sold power to areas as distant as Los Angeles, Long Beach and Burbank, Calif. He said the power would not be sold outside the company's jurisdiction unless there is a surplus.

Like other merchants, grocery store managers surveyed said they planned no decrease in opening hours.

Blaine need told

HAILEY — The Blaine County commissioners have expressed interest in a proposed county probation officer program.

Mack Reynolds, acting president of the Wood River Peace Officers Association, and members of the Community Services Council discussed the proposed program Wednesday with commissioners Ray Sweat and Jack Bennett.

Bennett said the commissioners had some unanswered questions about the program. Once these are cleared, he said, "I say yes, the program is going to go."

Bennett said the commissioners believed that a need existed for the program, but stated that its initiation would be dependent on available funding.

Sweat said the proposal "sounds like it's a real worthwhile program."

Under Reynolds' and the Community Service Council's proposal, a probation officer would be appointed to work under the court.

Duties would include conducting pre-sentence investigations or social histories; co-ordinating information from schools, police departments and the family; assisting police officers; assisting the schools in counseling and discipline problems; supervising probationers; and co-ordinating community services to aid the juveniles.

Reynolds said the program would cost about $19,000 the first year, including office supplies, transportation and salary. Second year costs should decrease, he said.

Reynolds said he would also be interested in applying for the probation officer position. Community Services Council member Lloyd Curtis said he didn't feel that taxpayers would object to the program costs because of the "benefits the county is going to derive."

Curtis said he felt a probation officer could prevent a great deal of future juvenile problems and said the program should be initiated before the county experiences further growth.

In other action, the commissioners scheduled a Dec. 11 meeting with mayors within the county to discuss a second Community Services Council proposal for a county recreation director.

Nordic ski school opens at SV

SUN VALLEY — A Thanksgiving Day opening has been set for the Sun Valley Nordic Ski School.

The school, in its third year of operation, is under the direction of Leif Odmark, former FIS cross country champion and former U. S. Olympic coach.

The school will again be headquartered at the Nordic Ski Center-Mallport in the tennis court complex.

Odmark and 20 instructors will be available this year and stated, "We are seeing a tremendous upsurge in the popularity of cross country skiing and especially touring."

Odmark said last year the school had a 120 per cent increase in lessons and said he expected that figure would be at least matched during the 1973-74 season.

The school will follow the same schedule as last year.

Offered daily will be half-day, full-day and several-day group and private lessons for beginners, intermediates, experts and racers. Group lessons will be one and one-half hours in length and will be offered from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 2:30 p.m.

In addition, alpine skiers who want to try cross country skiing will be able to trade one day of a week's lift ticket for Nordic equipment rental for a day and a half-day of class instruction.

Odmark said a number of Nordic tours are planned including excursions to Prairie Creek Lake, Miner Lake, Cherry Creek, Senate Creek and Senate Creek Ridge. The Clarendon Ski Tours will include time for swimming in the hot pools.

A helicopter trip to Devil's Bedstead Guest Ranch can also be arranged for lunch or an overnight trip can be arranged which includes lunch, dinner and breakfast. The tiki torch moonlight tour across the Sun

We're hard-boiled about saving energy

we think you should be, too.

Make the water boil like crazy if you're in a hurry. But it won't cook the egg any faster, and it will waste energy.

Using more heat than is needed for cooking is just one among many little ways we all waste our energy resources every day.

More wasteful energy gobblers include endless TV operation with nobody watching; running washers, dryers or dishwashers only half loaded; filling the bathtub when a quick shower would do; overworking the air conditioner; heating the iron for one task at a time; etc., etc., etc.

Added together, they become an unnecessary drain on our energy supply. Each of us needs to keep wise use of energy in mind.

And what about the egg?

After water reaches the boiling point, it won't get any hotter.

High heat will just boil away the water and waste energy. So turn the heat down so the water is just at the boiling point.

Your egg will be done just as soon, and you'll have joined the hard-boiled energy savers.

Taken one at a time, the little energy wasters are of small significance.

Mitchell-led Idaho rips Idaho State 43-0

Vandals break two offensive records

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Junior Darrell Mitchell rushed for 104 yards, including an 81-yard touchdown scamper to lead Idaho to a lopsided 43-0 win over its downstate rival, Idaho State.

Stiff Vandal defense and slippery astroturf combined to provide Idaho State with nothing but problems offensively. Bengal quarterbacks were sacked 11 times.

Mitchell not only boosted his own season rushing total to 809 yards, but a third quarter 34-yard scamper broke the old team season rushing record.

Idaho finished the season with a total 2,583 yards rushing to break the previous mark of 2,444 yards set in 1966.

The Vandal offense also set a new season total offense record of 4,250 yards, breaking the old mark of 4,046 also set in 1966.

Idaho went to the locker room at halftime enjoying a 27-0 lead and after a scoreless third quarter added 16 more points.

The other fourth quarter score came on an 11-yard run by reserve quarterback Dennis Ballock to cap a 22-yard drive set up by an ISU fumble.

Idaho scored the first time it got its hands on the ball with running back Mark Fredback pulling in a 60-yard pass from

the extra point, his first of five in the game.

Tanner booted a 34-yard field goal a minute and a half later to put the Vandals ahead 10-0.

Runningback J.C. Chidband

scrambled for 47 yards for a TD

to open the second quarter. It was about a minute and half later that Mitchell scrambled for his 82-yard score. Tanner booted a 37-yard field goal with eight seconds left in the half.

The win left Idaho with a season record of 4-7. Idaho State is 2-8 with one game remaining.

Air Force outlasts Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The Air Force held off a last quarter surge by 17th-ranked Arizona to capture a 27-26 win Saturday afternoon in an inter-sectional game.

Arizona scored with less than a minute left in the game, but Falcon cornerback Dennis Collins stopped the two-point conversion attempt to assure the Air Force victory.

The hard-fought battle was typical of the contests between the two schools. The Air Force won last year's game on a field goal after time had expired.

Air Force quarterback Rich Haynie threw two touchdown passes and running back Chris Mlodnayevich ran for one score as the Falcons upped their season record to 6-3. Arizona is 8-2.

Air Force scored first in the contest on a 27-yard field goal by Dave Lawson.

Arizona's only scoring threat in the first half came in the second quarter but the Air Force defense stiffened and a 27-yard field goal was missed.

Weber 45-14

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Gary Sheide tossed four touchdown passes, three of them to Jay Miller, to power Brigham Young to a 45-14 win over up-state rival Weber State Saturday.

Sheide — playing with his best bound in elastic bandages to protect a broken rib — completed 20 of 33 passes for 244 yards. And Miller, the nation's leading receiver, caught 10 of Sheide's aerials for the three scores and 155 yards.

The junior quarterback suffered a double break in one rib last week against Arizona, but "came back" throwing to guide BYU to the win in the first game ever between the two Utah schools.

a flying start with a pair of first quarter TD passes to Miller. The first scoring pass went for 88 yards to cap an 81-yard scoring drive.

Weber stumbled on the second play after the kickoff and Sheide hit Miller for a 28-yard scoring aerial on the next play.

TEXAS QUARTERBACK Marty Akins can't elude TCU's Dennis McGhee after a long run which set up the first Longhorn touchdown Saturday afternoon. The facemask penalty extended the run another 15 yards. (UPI telephone).

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Fullback Roosevelt Leaks smashed the Southwest Conference season rushing record and quarterback Marty Akins accounted for three touchdowns Saturday as 11th-ranked Texas smothered Texas Christian 52-7 for a share of its sixth straight conference title and the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

Leaks, who played only five minutes in the second half, ran for 105 yards in 21 attempts, bringing his rushing total for the year to 1,328 yards — 26 more than the previous conference mark. He scored once on a one-yard plunge.

The junior quarterback, who didn't play at all in the second half, passed seven yards to Tommy Landry for one score, 18 to Mike Cromens for another and ran three for a third. Billy Scholz booted a 26-yard field goal for Texas with three seconds remaining in the first half.

Barber collects $100,000 golf prize

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Round Miller Barber, who admits that he's "blown just about everything there is to blow in golf," finally won the big one after 16 years of trying when he fired a steady two-under-par 70 Saturday to walk away with golf's richest jackpot ever, the $500,000 World Open.

Starting the day just two shots behind playing partner Tom Watson, 16-years his junior, the cool and confident Barber simply played the tortuous No. 2 course of the Pinehurst County Club for pars, notching only one bogey against three birdies for the round to finish the eight round marathon at 70, two strokes over par. This gave him a three stroke margin over runner-up Ben Crenshaw.

It was the first time that a plus-par score has won an event since Gary Player captured the 1972 PGA championship at one over.

For the 42-year-old Barber, who lost two playoffs earlier this year and blew the 1969 U.S. Open after taking a three stroke lead into the final round, this victory was worth an incredible $100,000, the richest prize in golf history. It may also prove to be the last purse of its kind, since the tournament organizers announced earlier in the day that next year's edition of the World Open would be reduced to $325,000 with the winner receiving $76,000.

Young Crenshaw, who is half Barber's age, made a late run at taking his second consecutive tournament as he stood only one stroke behind the leader with three holes to play. But the blond Texan then bogeyed the 16th hole to finish at even par 71 and settle for second place money of $44,175.

Watson, who led the tournament by six strokes after both the fifth and sixth rounds and was still in front by two starting the final day, collected six-bogies-on-the-front-nine as both his long game and putting fell apart. His six over 77 gave him 576 for the tournament and put him in fourth place, one shot behind Len Thompson, who finished the day at even

Mississippi State

bows to LSU 26-7

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Safety Mike Pike intercepted two passes to set up scores Saturday night and Orange Bowl-bound Louisiana State went on to a 27-7 win over Mississippi State.

Before the game LSU accepted an invitation to play sixth-ranked Penn State in the Orange Bowl New Year's night. Some of the 66,536 fans tossed oranges onto the field toward the end of the game to celebrate the bowl bid.

The victory gives the seventh-ranked Tigers a 0-0 record for their Thanksgiving Day game against Alabama. LSU and Alabama are the only two Southeastern Conference teams with perfect records and their game should decide the league championship.

Pike's first interception stopped Mississippi State's first possession and gave LSU the ball on its own 35. Tailback Brad Davis scored from eight yards out seven plays later to put the Tigers on the way to their 11th straight win over State.

Pike's second interception, on a deflection by cornerback Dale Cangelosi, set up Rusty Jackson's 39-yard field goal — Jackson's longest at LSU.

Roca's 52-yard field goal came in the second quarter and was the second 52-yarder in his LSU career. He holds the school record with the same distance last year.

LSU also scored on a 14-yard run by alternate quarterback Billy Broussard and a 21-yard pass from quarterback Mike Miley to wide receiver Ben Jones as the Tigers won their first nine games for the first time since Paul Dietzel's 1958 team.

The victory gives the seventh-ranked Tigers a 0-0 record for their Thanksgiving Day game against Alabama. LSU and

Tulane overpowers

Vanderbilt 24-3

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Tulane quarterback Steve Foley ran 45 yards for one touchdown and one yard for a second to lead the 10th-ranked bowl-bound Greenies to a 24-3 victory over Vanderbilt Saturday night.

Tulane accepted a bid just before game time to play 14th-ranked Houston in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl Dec. 29 in the Houston Astrodome.

Tulane, 8-1, but still facing Peach Bowl-bound Maryland and Orange Bowl-bound Louisiana State, shut off Vandy's running game and turned on its own to take the win, rolling up 315 yards on the ground and 124 in the air.

Foley did it all for Tulane, winding up with 181 yards in 14 carries and completing two of eight passes for 58 yards.

The Greenies also scored on an 11-yard pass from Terry Looney to Jamie Garza, capping an 88-yard drive, and a 37-yard field goal by David Finkus.

Vandy's three points came on a 40-yard field goal by Golden Hawkins in the first quarter. The Commodores, now 4-5, penetrated to the Tulane four-yard line with six minutes left in the game, but failed to score when Fred Fischer missed on key passes.

Knicks defeat

Bucks 100-93

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willis Reed returned from a seven-game absence Saturday night to spark the New York Knicks to a 100-93 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks in a National Basketball Association game.

Reed contributed 10 points in a big third period effort as the Knicks won their fourth straight, and the Bucks lost their second in a row after a 14-game winning streak.

Dean Meminger scored a basket at 2:34 of the first period which gave the Knicks an 18-10 lead which they held until 3:27 of the final period when the Bucks rallied to tie the game.

Ironically, of the three leaders Friday, Barber was the only one to say that he would satisfy merely by finishing in the top three. Crenshaw and Watson both said that only a win would please them.

Thompson, who attended nearby Wake Forest and like Watson is a tour sophomore, birdied three holes on the back nine to squeeze into third place with a 75 total; five strokes off the pace, and earn $27,513.

Watson, saying "I know the shots I had to hit and didn't hit them," shared fourth place with Al Golberger, who closed with a 70, at 576. Watson and Golberger earned $17,500 each, quite a difference from the $100,000 Watson had partly tucked in his pocket Saturday morning.

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Now

Namath worked out for about an hour at Riverfront Stadium Saturday and will likely be activated for Sunday's game against the Cincinnati Bengals.

"In all likelihood, we will with the way he threw today."

However, it is not likely that Namath will start. Instead,

Ebark, who refused to be pinned down one way or

Namath's understudy for the past three seasons. Namath would thus be available on the Alabama quarterback Gary Rutherford threw two touchdown passes, a 60-yarder to Johnny Sharples and a nine-yarder to Randy Billingsley, and scored himself on a two-yard sweep around right end.

Miami, which upset Texas and nearly beat Oklahoma earlier this year, managed to slow Alabama's offensive attack, holding the Crimson Tide for under its 616-yard per game average. Jackie Rubin Carter made at least 15 tackles to spark the tough defense. But the Tide simply had too much firepower.

Alabama, second nationally in total offense and rushing offense, finished with 399 total yards, including 282 rushing and 117 passing. The Tide gained a lot of that yardage in the final period.

Shelby, who ran back a kickoff 100 for a touchdown earlier in the season, raced 52 yards with a punt by Roger Haines in the second period, and Bowles scampered 62 yards with a punt in the final period.

Sharpless, a second string end who had caught only four passes in Alabama's eight previous games, hauled in a perfect toss from Rutherford on about the Miami 20 without breaking stride and outran a defender to the end zone.

Alabama also got a touchdown on a five-yard run by James Taylor, and a safety that came when Greg Montgomery blocked a punt by Haines and the ball rolled out of the end zone.

Miami scored on a 75-yard pass from Coy Hall to Steve Marcantonio with 16 seconds left in the game and on a three-yard burst by Woody Thompson early in the third period after Rich Griffiths recovered a fumble on the Alabama 15.

Alabama intercepted four passes, two by Mike Washington.

The Tide's Bill Davis set a Southeastern Conference record for total career points by kicking, booting five extra points to give him 205 points.

The old record was 203 set by George Hunt by Tennessee in 1967-71.

and a two-yard run in the second quarter.

The fleet-footed halfback rushed for 119 yards in his seventh consecutive 100-yard plus game for a season total of 1,006, to become the first player in the league to break the 1,000 yard rushing mark this season.

Oklahoma opened its scoring with a 45-yard pass interception return by

than two minutes into the game.

Tight end Wayne Hoffman

scored late in the first quarter on a 48-yard pass from Davis.

Rick Fulcher closed out the opening period with a 32-yard

Touchdowns on short runs

Saturday to pace the third-ranked Sooners to a 40-20 thrashing of Kansas.

eight conference record 60-yard field goal in the midst of Oklahoma's first quarter 27-point scoring spree.

Now in operation

New restaurant opens

TWIN FALLS — Sandy's Restaurant, a new business in Twin Falls, is now open on the downtown mall. The restaurant at 125 Main Ave. E. is owned by Rex Ulrich and operated by his son-in-law, Dave Rounds. Rounds formerly worked with the Big Boy restaurant chain in Rapid City, S. D., and Omaha, Neb. Rounds said his restaurant "is the one with the only orange door on the mall." Decor in the cafe is in orange and black and dark brown with decoupage wall plaques of old gold and oil stock certificates obtained from firms which have gone broke.

The restaurant will be open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday with a full offering of meals ranging from breakfast, to coffee break, to merchant's luncheons and formal dinner. Specialties of chef Margaret Harris are the home baked breads, rolls, pies and other pastries with steak, lobster and similar main course items.

Sandwiches, wine and beer are also available in the restaurant.

A feature for the downtown merchants and employees is the special luncheon served from 11:30 to 1:30 p.m. on a cafeteria basis designed to provide fast service during the rush period.

All other meals feature full service and there is a banquet room for meetings and private parties at no charge other than for the orders of food or beverages. This will seat up to 18 persons with the total seating capacity of the restaurant at 69 persons.

Property exchange plan eyed

BLISS — Plans to organize a property exchange group within real estate boards of this area was explained to members of the North Side Board of Realtors Wednesday. At a dinner meeting at the Oxbow Cafe, Bliss, Lou Thorson, Twin Falls, spoke on the subject. He said this type of business has become popular since 1960 and traced the history of "exchanges," explaining the benefits to clients and the Real Estate Industry.

Thorson was introduced by John LeMoine, Hagerman, host for the evening.

President Gladys Davis, Gooding, conducted the business meeting, during which new Realtor pins and emblems were distributed.

Mrs. Bessie Standlee, Jerome, secretary, announced the Jerome members will host the December meeting.

Established this past summer, the firm offers personalized services of trained telephone secretaries for clients, including making appointments, handling telephone calls, secretarial services, and photocopying, she said.

The firm employs a staff of six persons. Remodeling of office space has been completed, Mrs. Burnikel said.

Prior to establishing the answering service, Mrs. Burnikel was employed for five years in the Twin Falls municipal water office.

Holiday to honor Kennedy

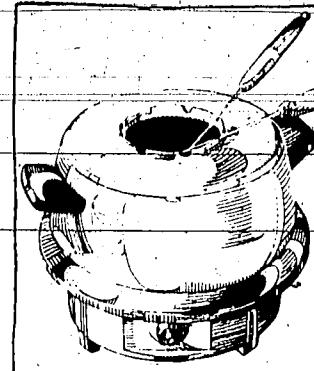

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Friday proclaimed Thanksgiving Day this year as a day of prayer in memory of President John F. Kennedy. The holiday falls on the 10th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination.

Nixon, who was defeated for the presidency by Kennedy in 1960, advocated the remembrance in his official annual Thanksgiving proclamation.

"On this Thanksgiving Day, we mark the 10th anniversary of the tragic death of President John F. Kennedy," Nixon said. "As we give thanks for the bounty and goodness of our land, let us also pause to reflect on President Kennedy's contributions to the life of this nation we love so dearly."

In the official statement required under law, Nixon said that he was proclaiming "Nov. 22, 1973, as a day of national thanksgiving, and concurrently, a day of prayer for the memory of John F. Kennedy."

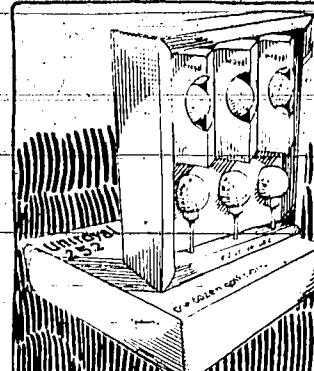

"Let all Americans unite on this day," the President said, "giving thanks for the manifold blessings vouchsafed our people, and inviting all those less fortunate than ourselves to share in those blessings in God's name, for His sake and for our own."

honored

Senior chosen finalist

TWIN FALLS — The National Council of Teachers of English has awarded Claudia Jean Brumbach, a Twin Falls High School senior, the NCTE Achievement Award. In writing.

Last spring, Claudia was chosen to represent Twin Falls High School in competition with three other juniors.

Brumbach, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Brumbach, won the award writing on Anne Morrow Lindbergh's analysis of her feelings after the kidnapping and murder of her 20-month-old son, Charles Lindbergh Jr. Her writing was judged by panel of high school and college teachers.

Mrs. Alpha Hann and Mrs. Gem Howard have been Brumbach's English teachers at Twin Falls High School, according to principal Frank Charlton.

The NCTE award was given to 850 finalists out of 30,400 applicants.

12 valley girls vie for '74 Twin Falls Junior Miss title

TWIN FALLS. — Twelve high school senior girls will compete for the Twin Falls County Junior Miss title at the Junior Miss pageant at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The pageant will be at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center. The event is co-sponsored by the Twin Falls Jaycees and Jay-C-ettes.

Del Scholl, Jaycee chairman, said contestants have entered from Murtaugh, Hansen, Kimberly, Twin Falls and Filer. The Jay-C-ettes chairmen are Sandy Becker and Karina Scholl.

Master of ceremonies will be Ralph Bowman, Ralph Bowman and Associates, Idaho's representative of the Dale Carnegie course. Debbie Skinner, the 1973 Twin Falls Junior Miss, will serve as mistress of ceremonies and will perform a dance routine.

Competing will be Edda Lancaster, Marla Coats, Margaret Harvey, Pam Mikesell, Caryl Tickner, Jane Klinke, Carol Lattimer, Debra Glenn, Becky Scherer, Janie Vincent, Tammy Casperson and Jennie Hill.

Edda Lancaster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lancaster, is a senior at Hansen High School. She is art editor of the school paper and active in Drama Club and declamation.

She plans to study fashion merchandising at the University of California at Los Angeles. She will give a dramatic reading. Roper's is her sponsor.

Marla Coats, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Coats, is a senior at Kimberly High School. She is choir vice-president and a member of Madrigals, Girls' Club, Music Club and OEA. She is a reporter for the school paper.

She plans to work at something practical and to sing to make people happy. She will present a vocal solo. Her sponsor is BeeLine.

She plans to become a dental or a laboratory technician, studying at Idaho State University or Boise State College. She will present a comedy routine. Her sponsor is Macie's Boots and Western Apparel.

Pam Mikesell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mikesell, is a senior at Twin Falls High School. She is president of Future Teachers of America and is a P. E. student teacher at Morningdale Elementary School. She is a member of Interact, Girls' League, Drill Team and Youth Council.

She plans to attend Brigham Young University or Ricks College and major in physical education. She will present a gymnastics routine. Her sponsor is the Idaho Department Store.

Caryl Tickner, a senior at Twin Falls High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Tickner. She is a student body secretary and a member of Interact, Track Team, National Honor Society, Drill team, Girls' Athletic Association and Girls' League.

She plans to attend Idaho State University majoring in biology education. She will give a piano solo. Her sponsor is Mayfair.

BOOK WORLD is introduced to two young pre-school enthusiasts, Jerry Lovd and Rhonda Mozdenski. 5-year old participants in the "Read-to-Me" program. Norma Creed, school district elementary librarian, does the reading honors.

Read-to-Me program benefits children, parents

TWIN FALLS. — The "read-to-me" set of Twin Falls can look to more entertaining sessions with their parents as a result of a six-week program just completed at the Twin Falls Public Library.

About 35 children and 25 parents participated in the program designed to help parents select books and present them in a manner of greatest interest and understanding by their 4 and 5-year-old pre-schoolers.

Children's librarian Sally Carpenter who designed the program said parents attended six Wednesday night programs with their children to hear librarians present story book sessions and to prepare for home reading sessions for the children.

Norma Creed, school librarian, presented the stories during the final night's program Wednesday. A large cake was served the participants and each child completing the program received a certificate.

Carpenter said the easiest way to encourage children to enjoy and understand books is to have them write their own book. A shelf full of books entitled "My Book" went on display at the library this week. Each was the composition of a pre-schooler and each represented his or her own idea of a story book.

"Ideally children should be introduced to the pleasures within the world of books before they enter school," the librarian said. "But often parents are at a loss as to selection of the right books and the oral presentation."

Each parent attending the program received a booklist and information on presenting the book to the small child.

Children-made-creations ranging from an egg carton sail boat to a milk carton house and a pipe cleaner turkey with real feathers to illustrate their understanding of the story highlights.

YOUNG WRITER, Michael Burton, compares his own book to those of other pre-school authors during "Read-to-Me" program at Twin Falls Public Library. Each child prepared his or her own book during reading program.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife is the private secretary to an important executive. She called me at work to tell me she was at her boss's HOUSE for a few hours to take dictation. She said he was on his "vacation" and was afraid if he went to the office he'd get tied up there all day.

I hit the ceiling, and told her in no uncertain terms that I didn't like the idea. She assured me that her boss's wife was home so I should simmer down.

An hour later I phoned the boss's house to make sure his wife was home. [She was] Then I asked to talk to the boss. I told him it was O.K. this time to have my wife working at his house, but I didn't like the idea, and not to ask her again.

Secretary too private

Well, Abby, since that happened my wife has been bolling mad at me. She said I humiliated her before her boss and his wife, and if I ever did that again, she would divorce me!

She insists I don't trust her. I do trust her, but I don't trust her boss. Do you think I was wrong to check up on her, and tell her boss how I felt? — FRANKLY JEALOUS

DEAR FRANKLY: Yes. You showed an insulting lack of confidence in both your wife and her boss.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a man who is attractive, hard-working, honest, sober, and morally sound, but he has one failing that absolutely drives me up a wall. He is cheap from the word go!

When he takes me out (which isn't too often) we always go to the least expensive place he can find. And there can be a parking lot right next to where we're going, but he drives around for half an hour to find a parking place on the street.

He tells me not to buy him anything for Christmas, because he hates to shop, and he's not buying ME anything.

Abby, I realize that he was poor when he was young, but he makes good money now, and has only himself to support.

He says he loves me, and we're discussing marriage, but I'm wondering what marriage would be like with a man who's so tight with his money. He's a beautiful person otherwise. Do you think he'll ever change? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: He's a creature of habit. I doubt if he will ever enjoy spending money, but with some gentle prodding, you could loosen him up a bit. When discussing marriage, don't forget to discuss budget, or you and this "beautiful person" will be having money fights for the duration of your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is 63, has expressed the desire to move to either Arizona, California, or Florida when he retires. He says he is tired of battling the Nebraska winters and wants to take it easy in a milder climate.

Abby, we've spent all our lives here, and all our family and friends are here, and I can't see us picking up and leaving all this behind to start all over again.

I'm not crazy about the winters here, either, but climate isn't everything. Don't lifelong friends, and family mean anything?

Please help me convince my husband that this is no time to pull up stakes and settle in a strange place with a bunch of strangers.

Or do you think maybe I'm the one who's wrong? He's even talking about a mobile home, or a senior citizens community.

IN A DAZE

DEAR IN: Don't make any decisions until you get a preview of the place your husband has in mind. You may be pleasantly surprised.

Old recipe turns hobby into business

EDEN — Dill pickles from a 25-year-old family recipe has turned a hobby into a commercial pickle business now in its second year in Eden.

Bill Morgan along with his partners Mrs. Claude (Leona) Rogers and his son Joe last year went into the business of making and selling dill pickles. This year they have added a line of sweet pickles as well.

The company called "The Cellar" is located in a renovated potato cellar. The remodeling of the cellar was a family project and included repairing the roof, paneling the walls, pouring and finishing a 50 by 200 foot of concrete floor as well as installing a complete sewer and water system.

The old cellar was turned into an office, cool room, rest rooms and kitchen. Added this year were large cooking kettles and steam boiler used in the process of making the sweet pickles and the sweet relish.

The kitchen is equipped with a machine that can slice three tons of cucumbers an hour as well as a slabbing machine, spearing unit and a packing area and equipment for testing.

Mrs. Rogers started making dill pickles about eight years ago for Morgan as a hobby from a recipe that was an original and now highly guarded secret of Joe's great-line of sweet pickles as well.

Before Morgan decided last year to go into the business of selling pickles he used to give them away to friends and different organizations.

Mrs. Rogers said that in January of this year she took the recipe and adapted it to a line of sweet pickles, "which have been as widely accepted as the dill pickles," Mrs. Rogers said.

"When I first started making the pickles I would average as many as 30 barrels a year, which were made in an old dirt floor kitchen in the potato cellar. Last year we packed 420 55-gallon barrels, this year we packed more," Mrs. Rogers said.

"The cucumbers, dill and garlic used in the process are all grown locally. The pickles are packed in the original brine which gives a cloudy appearance. We feel that this preserves the natural flavor that makes the pickles better. We do not use a synthetic reagent," Morgan said.

Morgan explained that the cucumbers are harvested from two five-acre fields, one in the Burley area and one in Eden. "With the two locations we feel secure that if frost hits one of the fields before harvest, we will still have the other field to work with," Morgan said.

"Approximately 120 tons of cucumbers were harvested this year. After they are picked they are brought to the cellar where they are placed on a bolt that carries them into a washer, then to the sorting table where they are hand sorted by part-time help. The cucumbers are classified by

Mrs. Rogers noted that to prepare the brine this year three 300 gallon vats were filled with 450 gallons of vinegar and over three and one quarter tons of salt along with the other secret ingredients including tender loving care.

The company has outlets in grocery stores, cafés and delicatessens in Twin Falls, Burley, Gooding and Sun Valley as well as a large walk-in trade.

Morgan said he feels the company has added to the economy of the Eden area and anticipates it will continue to do so.

"In the past the community has been known as the 'Garden of Eden' but in the future perhaps the signs will say, 'Welcome to Eden, Pickle Capital of the West!'" Morgan said.

Meeting set

TWIN FALLS — South Idaho Resource Planning and Development Association members will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Judicial Building here to discuss several development proposals. The group will hear a letter from the Ida-Ore Economic Development Association and receive recommendations from the Soil Conservation Districts in the area.

Legislation in which the planning and development group is interested will also be reviewed.

Leona Rogers displays bottled pickles

'Elijah' slated in TF Nov. 27

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Del Slaughter, will open its 15th season with a concert Nov. 27, at 8 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Center.

The orchestra, with the Magic Valley Chorale directed by Roger Vincent, will present Mendelssohn's "Elijah." This oratorio was first presented 103 years ago at a music festival in Birmingham, England, with Mendelssohn himself conducting the performance.

That premiere was a sensational success, and the work has continued to have a large measure of success ever since.

A cross section of Magic Valley is represented among the personnel of both the orchestra and the chorus. Each group has been in rehearsal for many weeks in preparation for this event.

Soloists are Mrs. Albert E. Allen, soprano; Mrs. Bryce Carr, soprano; Louis Kingsford, contralto; Jack Van Buren, tenor, and Roger Vincent, baritone.

Families will be admitted on patron tickets. General admission tickets may be obtained from the Warner Music Co. and The Music Center in downtown Twin Falls and at Sullivan's in the Lynwood Shopping Center.

No tickets will be available at the door.

Rapid changes fill life of Mrs. Ford

By LESTER KINSOLVING
Times-News, Washington

Bureau

WASHINGTON — "We had to get married on a Friday so that Gerry could go to a football game on Saturday," Mrs. Gerald Ford told the Times-News, during a brief interview in the White House.

"And after the game, we drove to Ossawa, Mich., in order to hear Thomas E. Dewey. We didn't get to our hotel until 4 a.m.!" recalled the pretty blonde wife of the vice president-designate.

Mrs. Ford was once a member of an all-girl football team of 12-year-olds who used to beat the boys back in Grand Rapids. Hence she understands the football addiction of her husband, a former star at the University of Michigan.

She had no interest in politics, however, until she met Ford. "Now I confess that politics is fascinating."

She found her husband, a young lawyer, "so terribly busy" when they first met in Grand Rapids. "He was on every committee in town." Their courtship consisted mainly of 11 p.m. dates and an occasional weekend of skiing.

The trim and attractive Mrs. Ford was once a member of Martha Graham's celebrated dance troupe, but she found the regimen of discipline too demanding and preferred instead a home life and raising children.

Within seconds of President Nixon's announcement of his nominating her husband to be vice president, the Ford's life changed substantially.

The garage of their Alexandria, Va., home (where they will continue to reside if his nomination is confirmed) is presently being converted in order to accommodate Secret Service men who attached themselves to the Fords within minutes of the President's nomination.

The Secret Service will also guard the four Ford offspring, one of whom, Jack, aged 21, is attending Utah State. The oldest son, Michael, 23, is a theological seminary student in Massachusetts, while 17-year-old Steven attends public high school in Alexandria and Susan, 16, is enrolled in Holton Arms girls' school in Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Ford devotes most of her time to the family. She believes that her husband should not run for the presidency in 1976 — "but Gerry is the boss in this family."

While there is a Ford family tradition of discussing politics around the dinner table, Mrs. Ford doesn't know how much the family influences the House minority leader who has represented his Michigan district since 1948.

"By the time Gerry gets home, I've seen what's on the news and unless he wants to talk about it we don't, as sometimes he's all talked out."

She and her children have all helped him campaign for recurrent re-elections. She used to be an avid golfer and skier until a pinched nerve put an end to these sports activities. Now she is interested in gardening.

While she considers her husband the boss of the family, she has had to be the disciplinarian because he is frequently away.

"It's not possible, frequently, to say 'Wait till Daddy gets home' — because that may not be for three days, as he's often off on speaking trips. So I've had to make lots of decisions."

THE BON MARCHÉ

At Wit's End

By Emma Bombeck

My obstetrician never promised me a rose garden, but I never thought I'd have to build the kids from scratch. My friends bore children with sound plumbing, straight teeth, curly hair, natural arches, and sinus passages that you could give a concert in.

Not mine. They had hernias, inflamed tonsils, walked on the inside of their shoes, had teeth erupting in the roof of their mouth, and were allergic to air, school, and antibiotics. It was like giving birth to used cars without warranties.

There wasn't a week that went by when there wasn't a strange wheezing under their hoods. And just when we made the last payment on the removal of the warts, something else would go.

It came as absolutely no surprise to anyone when last September Bruce came home with a form from the school nurse suggesting he needed glasses.

"Are you sure?" I asked the school nurse over the phone. "He has headaches," she said stiffly.

"Maybe he has to go to the bathroom," I said. "Is there any scientific basis for that diagnosis?" she asked.

"I read that once in Reader's Digest."

"He squints and he says his vision is blurred," she parroted.

"Very well," I said. "We'll get the glasses."

"I'll have to say this for Bruce. He wore those glasses from early morning to late at night, removing them only for polishing and when I slipped into his room as he slept and took them off so they wouldn't get broken in his sleep."

That was the first day. On the second day, he left them lying on the back of the commode between a wet towel and Time magazine.

On the third day he took them to school but left them in his lunch bag which was well on its way to being recycled before we caught it.

Occasionally, I would see the glasses... on the mantle, the dashboard of the car, on the dog for laughs, in the sewing basket, the clothes hamper, inside his baseball glove... but NEVER ON BRUCE!

The other day the school nurse summoned me to her office and said Bruce had been tested and the results were miraculous. His eyes were stronger and she was sure the glasses had made the difference... however, his phys. ed. teacher had noticed that one shoulder was a fraction lower than the other one...

I told her I'd bring it to the attention of our family mechanic on his 5,000 mile check-up.

MR. AND MRS. CECIL CALHOUN

MENTS AND THEY CAME WITH DELIGHTFUL SPEED.

The American North jumped to three hearts. Walter Avarelli, sitting East, passed, as did South. Belladonna doubled and the rest passed.

Belladonna opened the king of diamonds and shifted to the five of hearts. South could have escaped for a loss of 800 by letting that trump ride toward his nine, but South went up with the ace and eventually was down 1100.

To make matters worse, East and West had no game. A spade lead would beat three notrump; almost any defense would beat a minor suit game.

Duchess bored

LONDON (UPI) — The London Daily Mail said Friday that the Duchess of Windsor, widow of Britain's former King Edward VIII, told an interviewer that she is bored, lonely and sometimes ailing. "It's a bombshell world full of violence and horror," she was quoted as saying. "I no longer understand or like it too much." The article said she spends her days gazing out and entering small gatherings of friends at her home in Paris. She has already chosen her tombstone, the article said, a marble one to bear the inscription "Wallis, Duchess of Windsor." It will stand in Windsor Great Park near the grave of the duke and where Queen Victoria and Prince Albert lie.

The couple married in 1937 when the duke abdicated the British throne, for "the woman I love," to marry the American divorcee.

TWIN FALLS — Beta Sigma Phi members met Wednesday night to discuss Red Cross blood programs.

David Nelson, Red Cross chapter blood chairman, and Ida Merle Call, in charge of the blood program at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, spoke on blood procurement and blood needs in the community.

Both speakers emphasized the need for blood is always an emergency and there is no guarantee the next emergency might not be "your own."

Members met again Nov. 28 with LaRae Glennie in charge of the program. Her topic will be "Getting it together."

horn; Ronald Klimko, bassoon, and Donny Gold, clarinet.

U. of I. quintet concert has Paris theme

By LORAYNE SMITH

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — A Parisian theme permeated the Northwest wind quintet's appearance at the CSI Fine Arts Center Wednesday night. The group, composed primarily of University of Idaho faculty members, has been in existence for seven years, but this is the first performance in Twin Falls. Each of the members is a solo performer and they combine their musical skill to bring a well-balanced program, which featured other French composers or ones who had some connection with the French capital.

Their opening number, Anton Reicha's "Blaserquintet in B-Dur, Op. 88, No. 5," showed the quintet's excellent blending of tone and phrasing. Reicha is considered the "Beethoven of woodwind music," according to bassoonist Ronald Klimko, spokesman for the quintet, and in fact was a friend of his famous contemporary.

Reicha spent much time in Paris and two other composers whose music was featured also are French, while the last selection was by the late Alvin Elder, who was a student in Paris.

The quintet members include Richard Hahn, flute; Robert Probasco, oboe; Penny Gold, clarinet; Klimko, bassoon, and Bruce Matthews, French horn. While the horn is technically not a woodwind instrument, it is always included in the traditional wind chamber groups because its mellower tone serves as a catalyst for the other four.

The homogenizing influence of the French horn was apparent in the quartet by Jean Francals, which is written only for flute, oboe, clarinet and bassoon, and sounds tinny and pecky contrasted to the tone texture when the horn is participating.

Klimko said Francals, who is a contemporary composer, was influenced by the French school and this quartet is typical of Parisian barroom music in the 1920's.

The low-brow aspect of the Francals number contrasted well with the gentle, pastoral charm of Darius Milhaud's "The Chimney of King Rene" which describes the beauties of southern France. The seven-movement work was written as background music for a movie.

The Elder Quintet No. 1, which Klimko said the group was dedicated to the composer who died last August, is considered one of the best examples of contemporary American music. The slow Lento movement displayed the skill of horn player, Bruce Matthews, who is working on his master's degree at the university.

Klimko said the quintet hopes Matthews will be able to stay on the university music faculty. The other members each teach their own instrument and divide the academic music subjects such as theory and history, among them. Klimko also conducts the university orchestra.

The quintet usually tours for several weeks of the year, in addition to individual performances. Hahn, the flutist, recently concertized in Chicago and also performed with the Magic Valley Symphony here several years ago. Gold sandwiched in the Twin Falls concert from a tour with the university stage band.

This year the group plans a concert series in Oregon and Washington and has previously played in all the Boise schools and other Idaho cities. They had a grant from the Idaho Arts and Humanities Commission last year but it was not renewed this year.

This university group does much to bring the best of chamber music to Idaho residents in their home towns, keeping the best of musical traditions such as careful workmanship, but eliminating the formality of dress stiffness which "turn off" many people toward good music.

The young men's identical black and white striped shirts with black pants and Klimko's instructive verbal comments create just the right air of informality for the musicians' excellent performance.

TWIN FALLS — Twenty two boys of the Twin Falls-West LDS Stake have become Eagle Scouts this year, according to Bishop Hugh Call.

West LDS Stake has set a goal of having 50 boys make Eagle next year, Call said. Meanwhile, the 22 new Eagle Scouts are being rewarded with a trip to Salt Lake City this weekend where they will tour and play sports.

program slated

TWIN FALLS — Development of an aftercare program for mental patients is under way in Twin Falls, according to Tracy Bailey, who has been here since August as a special projects coordinator, under supervision of the Idaho State Mental Health Association.

This will entail finding resources in the community to help a patient from Idaho State Hospital South, Blackfoot, in areas of employment, housing and socialization, Bailey said.

Helping the returned mental patient to adjust to life outside the hospital is an important factor in his recovery, she said, and the aftercare program will need assistance from many persons in the community.

Other projects Bailey is working with, in conjunction with the Twin Falls County Mental Health Association, include a planned trip to the Blackfoot institution for family and friends of patients, in conjunction with the Boise mental health chapter, and obtaining furnishings to create a more homey environment at the state hospital.

Another aspect of the aftercare program is simply the need for volunteers to do simple things such as writing a letter and being a friend to a patient just out of the hospital, she said.

Another project is the Hotline, which needs more telephone volunteers so that the line can be open longer. The mental health chapter here has sponsored the Hotline for some time, and it provides volunteers to answer the telephone calls and refer troubled persons to other community resources, or just serve as listeners.

Bailey, a native of Warner, N. H., received her B.A. degree in social work from the University of New Hampshire in 1972 and worked as a perceptual aide in Yakima, Wash., before being assigned to the Idaho State Mental Health Association as a VISTA worker.

The VISTA volunteers are assigned to sponsoring organizations within the state where they will serve, she said.

ALLERGIES seem to plague more people more often today than ever, possibly because of increasing impurities in the air. Whatever the reason, those who are bothered with allergic reactions certainly don't want to invite them. The right carpet, and right carpet care, can help cut down some allergy problems in the home. For instance, dust is allergenic, so it will pay you to vacuum your carpets regularly, picking up surface and deep-down dust.

Bare floors allow dust to stir around and "fly" more, increasing the irritation to humans, young or old. Carpets tend to "catch" dust, so regular vacuuming keeps the whole room cleaner, fresher. Also, you should choose a non-allergenic carpet where family allergy problems are ALLERGIES seem to plague more people more often today than ever, possibly because of increasing impurities in the air. Whatever the reason, those who are bothered with allergic reactions certainly don't want to invite them. The right carpet, and right carpet care, can help cut down some allergy problems in the home. For instance, dust is allergenic, so it will pay you to vacuum your carpets regularly, picking up surface and deep-down dust.

Bare floors allow dust to stir around and "fly" more, increasing the irritation to humans, young or old. Carpets tend to "catch" dust, so regular vacuuming keeps the whole room cleaner, fresher. Also, you should choose a non-allergenic carpet where family allergy problems are known to exist. Many of the newer man-made fibers, like polyesters and acrylics, are non-allergenic. But remember, too, that natural fibers, like wool, are often treated to make them non-allergenic. They'll be labeled if they're treated, so take a look . . . or ask us.

We'll be glad to answer all your carpet questions, and delighted to show you the great array of values we're showing right now . . . carpets you'll be proud to show off, at low prices to surprise you. Come in and take a good look!

What's What

L. M. Boyd

No reference to the birth control pill should be written as "The Pill," I'm told. "The Pill" of the future will not only limit the size of the family, but will cure headaches, relieve anxieties, encourage sleep, dry the nasal passages, enliven the hormones, and furnish vitamins. Such is the prediction of the pharmaceutical boys. Remarkable, if true. Am whimsically advised, however, that there may be one little side effect with "The Pill." It's expected to be fascinating.

As asked what's the most durable of all animals. The turtle, possibly. Experiments show turtles have survived for 24 hours in chambers filled with nitrogen, but no oxygen. You and I, therein, would fold in less than five minutes, friend.

QUESTIONS FROM CLIENTS

Q. "How much does it cost a Tokyo girl to get her eyes widened Western-style by cosmetic surgery?"

A. About $125.

Q. "Do the vampire bats of tropical America have hollow fangs through which they actually can suck the blood of their victims?"

A. No, their teeth bite, the blood flows, their tongues lap Oh, mercy me, hurry with the next question, Cynthia.

Q. "How come the Secretary bird is so called?"

A. Male secretaries of yesterday at business offices used to park their quill pens behind their ears. The bird has tufts of narrow feathers that stick out behind its head. That's why.

SEX IDOLS

Odd the TV dramas haven't produced any sex idols, isn't it? The way the Hollywood movies manufactured Marilyn Monroe and Clark Gable. And sports turned out Joe Namath, Jean Claude Killy. But TV, none. Or I can't think of any. Can you?

May be you prefer a temperature of around 74 degrees F. air. Understandable. But then you're not covered all over with hairy hide. Presumably, Take the Holstein bull. He prefers a temperature of around 45 degrees F. Researchers at the University of Minnesota reported that Were you aware that a Libra loves to spend, but hates to pay the bills? Or that a Sagittarius tends to be exceedingly quick-with-bright-ideas, sometimes too quick? Or that an Aquarius is apt to be so self-confident that quarrels become fun? Such be the claims of the stargazers.

Reception honors two TF women

By LORAYNE SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Reminiscences of early days at the University of Idaho flavored a reception at the CSI Commons Wednesday night honoring two longtime Twin Falls women.

Mrs. Cecil Jones, who graduated from the university in 1918, and Mrs. Anna Hayes, who has an honorary doctorate of literature from the school, were given special recognition at the event by Gerald Meyerhofer, CSI director of admissions.

The reception followed the concert given by the University's Northwest Wind Quintet which was in Twin Falls for a Young People's Concert, sponsored by District V Junior Music clubs. The quintet members also gave a matinee for students during the afternoon.

Mrs. Jones recalled that when she was a student at Moscow, heat was provided by either coal or wood stoves and girls were not allowed to date during the week and had to be in by 11 p.m., on Saturdays.

Mrs. Hayes, who graduated from the former Albion State Normal and has served as president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers as well as writing numerous books, told me a little of her "musical history" during intermission.

She recalled, as a child, taking a jug of milk to the wife of the Methodist minister in Albion to pay for organ lessons. Fascinated by verbal descriptions she had heard of a piano, non-existent in pioneer times in Cassia County where she was born, Mrs. Hayes remembers when she was a small girl laboriously blocking in make-believe piano keys on an old coal oil can.

Impressed by her interest, her father, who served as superintendent of schools in Cassia County, which then included all of the undeveloped Twin Falls Tract, decided she deserved a real instrument. Since there were no pianos, he obtained an organ for her. Her father enjoyed playing the flute, she recalls, and tried to teach her to play the piccolo, but decided she "wasn't built for it."

Recent graduates from the University of Idaho, as well as older alumni, enjoyed visiting with the quintet members during the reception, and the event afforded some parents of current university students to

The format for these Young People's concerts, which in addition to bringing musical exposure to many students, provides scholarship funds, includes a matinee for students and a public concert at night.

Mrs. Don Stephenson was chairman of the tea table for the reception and Mrs. Gordon Beckstead, president of the Twin Falls Senior Music Club, assisted. Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Jones posed.

Mansfield urges gas rationing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senator Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield charged Friday "we are dilly-dallying" while the economy burns, and called for gasoline rationing as soon as possible to ease the energy crisis.

President Nixon's energy adviser, John A. Love, also endorsed rationing as the best way to conserve gasoline rather than a gas tax boost to deter consumption. Love and other administration spokesmen doubted that such action was warranted.

Mansfield said in a Senate speech during debate on a fuel-emergency bill that there will be a recession next year unless the nation attacks energy problems effectively now.

While pleading for fast action on the bill to give the President power to order rationing, lower highway speed limits and restrict uses of scarce energy, Mansfield said it appears the Senate would not act on the measure until at least Monday because of numerous changes senators were trying to make in the measure.

"I suggest the Congress take heed and that the President use his power. Start the presses rolling as far as (rationing) coupons are concerned."

The Montana Democrat added: "Unless something is done, mark my words, it'll mean recession in 1974."

He said among the consequences of delay or ineffective action to combat the energy crisis could be industry shutdowns with resultant cuts in production and high unemployment.

Sen. Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo., agreed with Mansfield. "The nation is in deep trouble if we don't do something about energy," he said.

As for rationing gasoline, Love said he felt this was the most effective way of conserving the fuel, particularly since it is against rationing, and suggested Thursday that the situation was not as serious as portrayed by some. Presidential counselor Melvin R. Laird endorsed not only gasoline taxes but taxes on other fuels, plus electricity, as well.

Ore load leaves Cuprum mine

Strip mining operation set near Hells Canyon

By DWIGHT JENSEN.

Special to the Times-News
CUPRUM, Idaho — Just across the ridge from Hells Canyon — the subject of an intensive protection effort by environmentalists — the Silver Queen Mining Co. is preparing to start strip mining operations in January, and the environmentalists don't seem disturbed about it.

The Silver Queen people don't see why anyone should be disturbed. They say they are taking pains to make certain their operation does not ruin the watershed or the scenery or pollute air, land or water.

They have confined their work to a few acres, and promise to control runoff and tailings and to clean the whole place up when the copper runs out — something they predict will happen about ten years from now.

Mint superintendent Wiley Brooks says he thinks the place would look nice if it were left as a man-made mountain lake.

An underground mine has been in operation here for more than a year. It's not the first copper mining operation in Idaho history. There was one very near here many years ago, and the Klein Schmidt Grade, one of the steepest roads in Idaho, was cut into the mountainside to take the ore down to boats in the Snake River. But the mining became uneconomical and was abandoned.

Silver Queen has found a new vein and has built a mill here to cut the costs of shipping. About 300 tons of ore each day are brought out of the underground mine; the strip mine will increase production to about 800 tons.

The ore is sent through a crusher, and the powdered ore then undergoes a series of flotation operations to separate copper from dross. After the last flotation is complete the mill produces a concentrated ore that is 45 per cent copper. That concentrate is shipped to Quebec for smelting.

The mill is currently being expanded to handle the strip mine production.

Residents of nearby Cuprum and Council express few reservations and a lot of enthusiasm about the mine. It's good for the local economy, and they see no environmental danger involved.

They have confined their work to a few acres, and promise to control runoff and tailings and to clean the whole place up when the copper runs

WASHINGTON — Chief

Judge John J. Sirica has told the Senate

Judiciary

Committee

that he and at least eight other judges at United States District Court oppose the establishment of a court-appointed Watergate prosecutor.

Sirica said in a letter

Thursday to committee chairman Sen. James O.

Eastland, D-Miss., that he is in "full agreement"

with Judge

The Senate committee is

senators, which would create a court-appointed prosecutor.

The House Judiciary Committee has already cleared a

full House.

Gesell offered his view on the matter Wednesday in an opinion which declared that the

Ruth, the second-ranking official of the Watergate prosecution team, and two former prosecutors, James Vorenberg and Philip Heyman, appeared before the committee Thursday.

Vorenberg and Heymann, both professors of law at Harvard University, said they favor a court-appointed prosecutor and believe that course is fully constitutional.

Hruska and other Republicans have expressed the view that it would not be.

The Senate committee is scheduled to vote on the prosecutor legislation Wednesday, and Republicans Thursday sought to use the Gesell opinion to bolster their opposition to the bill.

At a judiciary committee hearing, Republican Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Roman Hruska of Nebraska commented favorably on Gesell's opinion. Henry

Nixon 'secret police' hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the first of a series of 10 weekly statements offering grounds for President Nixon's impeachment, the AFL-CIO says Nixon committed an impeachable offense when he set up his own "secret police" to violate the legal rights of the American people.

The labor federation accused him of instituting in the name of national security a plan which violated civil liberties through domestic political surveillance, espionage, wiretapping, burglary, eavesdropping, opening of mail and military spying on civilians.

It said Nixon approved a plan to use the FBI, CIA and other federal agencies to set up a domestic intelligence unit. Nixon later rescinded the plan, it said "not because the plan was illegal, not because it was a bad plan, not because it was repugnant to the entire democratic history and traditions of the republic, but because FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover objected to the plan."

It said Nixon had committed an impeachable offense by

hears warning

JEROME — The Jerome Chamber of Commerce was warned Wednesday not to become a vigilante group in its aims to improve the downtown shopping area.

Art Rathburn, University of Idaho Co-operative Extension Service, told the Chamber that many times concerned groups can enter into some type of community development in order to save their town and end up destroying it.

Rathburn pointed out that it is usually an economic factor that sets off any kind of development. He said the Chamber should consider the reasoning behind the desire for downtown reconstruction.

"Your reason for using the mall concept may be based on two factors, one, a jealousy because Twin Falls has a mall and two, in order to compete with Boise and Twin Falls, you must have the same," Rathburn said.

Rathburn presented several alternatives to the mall concept, stating that the lack of parking meters in downtown Jerome was a great benefit to merchants, and that a small town can offer personalized service which is not usually found in a larger town.

He said merchants should emphasize the service more and possibly instigate an awards system whereby a sales clerk would be given a day off each month for good service and friendliness to the customer.

Rathburn also said that Instigation-64, a consumer service operated by the Chamber of Commerce would help to keep the Jerome shoppers in Jerome. He said the consumer service works by having a central information center where the consumer can call to obtain information about where certain merchandise is available.

"Considering all factors of the community, are the means you are taking to reach the objectives being considered for the whole community? Will they enhance or increase the physical environment of the community or will it destroy or create undesirable effects in the social environment?" Rathburn said.

What You're Saying —

Do you support a mandatory 50 miles per hour speed limit on all highways and gas rationing to conserve on gasoline?

Laura Jackson, Boise:
"I'm for it, I don't drive any faster than that anyway because you do save gas. I would rather have gas rationing than a price increase."

Louis Wolne, San Diego:
"I think it would be a good idea. It would save lives as well as gas. About rationing the gas, that part is a farce, but I guess if it would help the national interest. If this would be the only answer there would be no other choice in the matter."

Carmen Truscott, Twin Falls:
"A 50 m.p.h. speed limit? Yes! If it's necessary, yes I suppose we should start rationing gas. If we stopped sending wheat and supplies to the Arab countries we might not have this problem to begin with. I realize that there is a lot more involved than just the Arabs and the war concerning the gas shortage."

Vonnie Judd, Hansen:
"I support the 50 m.p.h. speed limit. I think it would probably help. About the gasoline rationing, we would be forced to rationing if it came to that. In which case I would support that."

Dean Walker, Twin Falls:
"No I don't support a mandatory 50 m.p.h. speed limit. About the gas rationing, they may have to, it may become a necessity."

Mrs. Rodney Bolich, Jerome:
"Yes, I support the 50 m.p.h. speed limit. My husband is a farmer and I don't think we should have gas rationed to the farmers but then I don't want to deprive anyone else. I do try to travel at 50 to 55 mph on the highways and it upsets me when a car goes by going 70 because I don't feel they are doing their part."

Chicano officer tells story

By LORAYNE SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Julio Pena says when you're a member of the Idaho State Police you're a person — not a black, white or Mexican-American.

Pena, an articulate young Texas-born American of Mexican parentage, is the only Chicano employed by the state police in the Magic Valley district.

There's a "whole world of difference," according to the patrolman between his present employment and his first law enforcement experience in Bonneville County. There he was constantly reminded he was hired because of his minority status and his colleagues had no qualms about calling him anytime of the day or night to assist with aliens.

Because Pena is bilingual he is able to help his fellow officers in dealing with non-English speaking cases. He has written up "some of the most needed sentences and phrases in Spanish to aid the state police in dealing with Chicanos.

Those include simple questions like, "Are you a citizen?" and the all-important "Are you a wetback?"

The other patrolmen appreciate his help, Pena says, and he is pleased to "do anything to help keep the state law enforcement at the highest professional level — not just from abstract idealism, but because it was a white officer who 'made the difference' in his life.

Pena's parents came to Idaho in 1955 and the family settled in the Caldwell area where he attended Vallivue High School, dropping out in his junior year to join the Marines and subsequently serve in Vietnam where he was wounded.

Asked about prejudice he has encountered, the patrolman says he can't recall any problem in the Marines because "they really pounded it into us to not have prejudice." And in high school, while there were only half a dozen or so Mexicans, Pena said "If you took a step, the teachers would go all the way to help."

However, this didn't preclude unpleasantness from some fellow students, being called "greaser" and laughed at for bringing tortillas for lunch instead of sandwiches.

The young officer also knows from personal experience the attitudes of young Mexican-Americans "living just to get out each night to get drunk and beat someone up" and their feelings about law enforcement officers.

"When I was in school you just couldn't picture a Chicano in a state police uniform," he said.

But it was a white officer who got through to him that while he might get satisfaction from his frustrations by beating up whites, or wielding his knife, if he really wanted to help improve conditions for his people he should "get involved" — work hard, go up the ladder to change the system.

Familiar advice, given to youths of every race and creed for centuries, but Pena listened. When he got out of the service he went to Treasure Valley Community College and studied law enforcement, and when the Idaho Falls opening came, quit to become part of the "establishment."

Who gives him the worst time as an officer? The young Mexican-Americans are by far the most derogatory, he finds. They feel that he "should be on their side, that Chicanos are brothers, and a brother doesn't put a brother in jail."

"We're supposed to be one tight group of people, according to the young Chicanos," Pena says, "with a tendency to rebel because we don't have all the privileges of whites. But the only way to get equal treatment is to work for it legally."

Pena is not yet "graduated" to working out in a police car, but since he joined the ISP in April already he realizes picking up wetbacks (Mexicans entering this country illegally) is not pleasant, but its "part of the job." He feels these people are not usually hurting anything but they are here illegally and many of them have saved huge sums of money, even though they receive meager wages, by working long hours and "living in shacks."

The patrolman knows first hand about being the underdog. His father, who had legally entered the country possessing the necessary "green card" similar to a military ID card, died when he was young, leaving his mother with 10 children, most of them still at home.

There was "absolutely no way," Pena recalls, they could have survived on his mother's welfare check if the children had not worked to help out, but they had to do this secretly or face losing the welfare aid.

Have conditions improved any for Chicanos? Pena said when he first moved to Caldwell there were "No Mexican" signs everywhere but a white farmer was among those instrumental in eliminating that discrimination. He feels there are many more open doors now for young Chicanos.

Asked about the term Chicanos, Pena said some of the more radical of his people feel the word is derogatory, but to him it is merely a shortened version of Mexican-American.

"It's something like Negroes preferring to be called black, I think," the officer says, "but for those who are settled, it doesn't matter."

Now, at 25, when Pena is faced with prejudice it "goes in one ear and out the other" because he feels secure in his work for which he has qualified as an individual, regardless of nationality.

The state law enforcement agency does not change its qualifications for any minority job-seeker, Pena says proudly.

Asked his opinion of Cesar

Chavez, who has crusaded for higher wages for Mexican farm laborers, Pena said the leader started out well, but now is "rich overnight," citing individuals he knew who were earning $1.80 per hour before Chavez organization came into the San Diego area, but now actually take home $1.25 per hour, the rest going to the union which came to help.

In his off hours, Pena likes to ride a motorcycle and this sometimes brings interesting results. Recently a fellow motorcyclist told him a long story about how he had outridden a cop and vocalized his colorful opinion of how all policemen are pigs.

Pena said earnestly "I don't condemn the man because he thinks officers are pigs—some are, but you should have seen his mouth drop when he learned I was a state policeman."

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Boy Scouts of America were incorporated Feb. 8, 1910, following a visit to England by William D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher. The World Almanac recalls: In England Boyce met Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Scouting movement, and was inspired to bring the idea to the U.S. Today there are about 5,000,000 boys and about 1,600,000 adult leaders in the Boy Scouts of America.

Shoshone bicyclist, 84, collects history data

SHOSHONE — Residents of Shoshone are not surprised when they see an 84 year old bicyclist pedaling through town.

They know it's J. J. Lockie, 84, probably out to collect information for the Shoshone history he is writing.

In addition to being an enthusiastic bike rider, he keeps busy with the yard work and the garden at the Desert Rose Senior Citizen Home.

Born in Chicago, Ill., he came to Twin Falls in 1919 and was employed by the Idaho Power Co. until 1933 when he moved to Shoshone and entered the bee business.

He said he had 600 colonies of bees at one time but closed that business up when the price of honey dropped to two cents a pound. He and his wife then moved to Caldwell where they remained until her health failed in 1966 and they returned to Shoshone to be near a daughter, Mrs. Reid Newby.

Lockie, who says his bicycle provides excellent transportation in addition to exercise, is working on a history of the Shoshone railroad town dating back to 1882. He has a number of pictures of the early days of the town in his collection and has typed a narrative himself.

Lockie pedals his bicycle to the Shoshone Post Office every morning to pick up mail for the residents of the senior citizens home where he lives. He said he hasn't missed a church service in a long time and calculates he has been present for 1,172 consecutive Sunday services.

A Rose Is A Rose Is A Rose—Especially If It Is All America

By O. A. (GUS) KELKER

With snow in the surrounding hills—and perhaps even on the ground outside your home as you read this—we thought dreaming a little about next spring and summer might be just the thing.

So we thought this was as good a time as any to announce the All-American Award Winning Roses for 1974.

The three All-American winners are Perfume Delight and Bon Bon (see pictures with this story) and Bahia (see cover color picture).

PERFUME DELIGHT

Probably the three most important qualities a rose bloom can possess are fragrance, attractive color and large, shapely flowers. Rarely, however, is any one rose endowed with all three. Even beloved Peace, huge and magnificent, lacks fragrance. There is, however, among the 1974 AARS winners, a hybrid that does possess the above qualifications and is in every sense a most outstanding rose. Perfume Delight, as its name indicates, has an enchanting spicy, tea rose fragrance. In addition, the color of Perfume Delight is a rich, deep pink and the four to five inch blooms, well supported on strong stems above a thick, bushy plant, are all that could be desired in a rose destined to be among the greats.

As an example of the delightful, penetrating fragrance of this rose, when a bouquet of Perfume Delight was carried through the audience to be introduced at the New York Press Luncheon last June, all heads turned to discover the source of the sudden wave of fragrance that filled the room.

A product of the breeder and rose specialist, O. L. Weeks of Ontario, California, Perfume Delight comes from a parentage replete with fragrance. Of the five All-American award winners in its immediate ancestry, three (Charlotte Armstrong, Mirandy and Chrysler Imperial) are noted for their rich perfume. Further back on the family tree are to be found Madame Butterfly, Joanna Hill, Crimson Glory, Rome Glory and Night, all deliciously perfumed as well as being good growers.

The urn-shaped buds of this 1974 winner, classically long and pointed, are very deep pink, opening into large, high-centered, clear pink blossoms, many of which will no doubt find their way to the show tables of the rose societies as gardeners become acquainted with this variety. As an added asset, its excellent coloring fades very slowly and the bloom remains attractive until the petals drop.

Perfume Delight produces a vigorous, well-branched, medium-tall plant with an abundance of deep green, leathery foliage completely covering it from top to bottom. The strong, bright green canes break from the base of the plant and constantly grow new branches, producing a continuous display of flowers from spring until heavy frost. The leaves are disease resistant and the plant stands up well against the rigors of both winter cold and summer heat.

BON BON

Seldom does a floribunda come along with as great a potential for a landscaping rose as this new 1974 award winner, Bon Bon. Densely covered with masses of large, showy, deep rose and white bicolor blooms from spring until fall, this new floribunda produces a low-growing, compact plant, ideally suited for landscape use. It should give great satisfaction, both in plantings on the home grounds and for use in large, flowery exhibits in parks, along highways, or as striking color spots in the landscaping of commercial properties.

The individual blooms of Bon Bon run as large as 3½ inches and the bright rose-pink and cream buds open to rounded, cupped flowers formed by as many as 25 petals of extra heavy substance. Because of the masses of large, fully open flowers, the plant in full bloom forms a huge, two foot high living bouquet. As an added asset, the roses are as richly fragrant as they are colorful. As the flowers of Bon Bon reach the end of their life, they exhibit as especially desirable trait in landscape roses—the petals fall cleanly, never hanging on to create an unsightly picture. The plant has been generally rated as being resistant to blackspot and mildew.

Hybridized in 1965 by William Warriner of Tustin, California, Bon Bon's illustrious parentage includes such world famous names as Bridal Pink, Spartan and Fashion.

BAHIA

A very floriferous floribunda from the skills of Dr. Walter E. Lammerts, Dean of American Rose Hybridizers. Rated in the AARS trials as one of the finest floribundas tested, this 1974 winner, Bahia, bears its eye-catching coral-orange flowers constantly. The blooms are double, averaging 3-4" in diameter in clusters of three to several, pleasingly formed and having a nice, spicy, citrus fragrance. The double flowers are made up of 20-30 petals plus 10-18 petaloids, and remain attractive until the petals fall.

In contrast to the low-growing Bon Bon, Bahia is a vigorous, tall, growing floribunda and, unlike many tall growing roses, is well branched to produce a shapely plant with strong stems that give it a distinct value as a producer of cut flowers.

The foliage of Bahia is dark green, semi-glossy and dense, leading to a recommendation from some AARS Judges that it would make an excellent medium-tall hedge plant.

The parents of Bahia are Tropicana and the floribunda Turnba. Going back further to the ancestry of the 1974 winner, we find a series of outstanding roses, including Peace, Goldilocks, Masquerade, Holiday, Floradora, Doubloons, Tallman, Margaret McGredy and many others. With such a potential for a fine offspring, it is small wonder Bahia captured one of the three 1974 AARS awards.

Bahia, because of its height, would lend itself to special uses. Always, tall growing plants are needed in the back of a border or rose bed, or as the center planting of a large bed that may be viewed from all sides. It will also qualify as an excellent and floriferous hedge plant, thus adding beauty to utility. Rose show exhibitors will like Bahia for, although its flowers are medium in size (3-4") they are perfectly shaped and borne on long, strong stems, with petals of excellent substance. Flower arrangers will likewise take great pleasure in this rose for its above listed qualities plus its clear, coral orange color—and its perfume.

Roses Are For You

Times-News readers can obtain copies of the handbook "Roses Are For You" without charge by simply requesting it. It will be a useful tool for winter garden planning—or getting ready for next spring.

Here's all about it:

It's a handbook covering the many uses for roses, clearly illustrated in a long series of pen drawings by Henry Aul. You can get the 16-page booklet free of charge by sending your request directly to:

All-American Rose Selections

P. O. Box: 218

Shenandoah, Iowa 51601.

Beside the seven pages of sketches covering the uses of roses, is included a description of the classes of roses, directions for cutting rose blooms; the meaning of disbudding, growing of exhibition roses, and a listing of the 112 AARS accredited Public Rose Gardens where plants of the AARS winners may be seen in bloom long before they are offered for sale by the nurserymen and rose specialists. There is also an explanation of the functions of All-American Rose Selections and a map showing the location of the 22 official test gardens.

Thanksgiving parade slated

LOS ANGELES — Sebastian Cabot, who will play Kris Kringle in the musical holiday special "Miracle on 34th Street" Friday, Dec. 14 on the Network, will be featured on the colorful three-hour parade spectacle, "CBS All-American Thanksgiving Day Parade," to be broadcast Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 22 on the CBS Television Network.

Cabot, the English actor who starred in the successful television series "Checkmate" and "Family Affair" and hosted "Ghost Story," will comment from the anchor booth on the four featured parade segments originating from New York, Philadelphia, Detroit and Toronto, Canada.

Anchorman for the broadcast will be William Conrad, star of "Cannon" on the Network, as previously announced. Also featured in the studio will be Melissa Galbraith, the current "Miss Teenage America."

Highlighted in this year's New York Macy's Parade segment will be eight helium filled balloons — Mickey Mouse, Smokey the Bear, Happy Dragon, Dino the Dinosaur, Underdog, Bullwinkle Moose, Snoopy and Linus the Lionhearted.

The only parade in the hemisphere in which helium balloons are featured, the New York parade will also present a miscellany of floats including four newcomers — the Animated Turkey, Humpty Dumpty, Mother Goose and Alice in Wonderland.

The Detroit J. L. Hudson Parade will mark the parade debut of Jonathan Livingston Seagull, literary and film star of the best-selling novel by Richard Bach. The seagull will be accompanied by 130 of his fellow gulls on a special float followed by Dopey, Fleegle, Snorky and Bingo, stars of the "Banana Splits" series.

The 54th Annual Philadelphia Gimbel's Parade will have a new look this year.

Twenty-five floats and balloon figures from the Land of Make-Believe, created just for this parade, will feature scenes from the pages of children's beloved storybooks springing to life on 70-foot floats.

Also featured will be 51 larger-than-life size walking figures created in a Viareggio, Italy studio where carnival figures and floats have been constructed for a century. (Billie Jean King, who recently struck a tennis blow for women's lib, will be the Grand Marshal of the parade.)

The Toronto, Canada Eaton's Parade, the oldest parade going into its 89th year, will present a variety of favorites such as Mother Goose, Robin Hood, Cinderella and Jack Frost. Animation and sound effects will be featured on the Spooky Tumble-Down Ghost-Guest House float and the Nuttiest Show on Earth Circus float.

Spotlighted in each parade will be the holiday season's special soul — Santa Claus. In New York, Santa and his complete toy factory will arrive by way of reindeer; in Philadelphia, Santa will dash across rooftops in a brand new sleigh to climb a 100-foot ladder to Toyland; in Detroit, Santa glides in space in a turquoise sled to mount the steps to Santa Claus' Castle; and in Toronto, St. Nick, followed by eight Santa gnomes with red fuzzy hoods, will wave Hello from his sleigh atop the roofs of snow-covered homes.

The "CBS All-American Thanksgiving Day Parade" will be produced by Mike Gargiulo.

New TV series for 1974

LOS ANGELES — "Dirty Sally" and "Great Day," two new half-hour series starring gifted actresses acclaimed for their performances in two established series on the CBS Television Network, will be mid-season replacements on the Network, it was announced today by Robert D. Wood, President, CBS Television Network.

"Dirty Sally," a western-based comedy, to be presented Fridays, 8:00-8:30 p.m., PST, stars Jeanette Nolan and Duck Rambo, re-creating the roles they originally portrayed in a two-part episode on "Gimme a Break" two years ago.

"Great Day!" is the tentative title of a comedy series scheduled for Fridays, 8:30-9:00 p.m., PST, starring Esther Rolle, in an expansion of her current role of Florida in the "Maude" series, and veteran actor John Amos.

Book tells demise of mesa

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Hopi Indian tradition says that destruction of Black Mesa will mark the beginning of the end of the world.

And, as usual, the white man is "helping" the Indian bring this promise to fruition.

Black Mesa is in the Four Corners area where Utah, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico come together. And it is the center of a vast complex that is strip-mining coal to produce electricity for a huge area.

The case against "progress" is presented in word and picture by Suzanne Gordon and Alan Copeland in "Black Mesa: The Angel of Death," published recently by the John Day Company of New York ($4.95).

Copeland took the striking pictures that show the plants involved belching smoke into the heretofore clean desert air of the area.

And Miss Gordon spins the words that spell out the story of the rape of a landscape in the name of progress.

The text of the book, though stridently conservationist, tells part of its story through use of the Hopi and Navajo traditional tales.

FAIRFIELD — Sewage treatment facilities are making an appearance in national forest areas.

Sawtooth National Forest Service crews have completed a lagoon system 25 miles north of Fairfield at Big Smoky with the facility to serve the interregional Fire Camp and the Big Smoky Guard Station.

In addition it will serve tourists with self-contained camper or trailers. A dump station has been constructed near the lagoon where self-contained units may dump their tanks and clean out after camping in forest areas.

Tom Pestotnik, engineer, said the two lagoons cover about .6 of an acre. Waste from public toilets in the surrounding district will be pumped into the dump station to be carried into the lagoons.

He said about 30 fire fighters are maintained at the fire camp and 10 to 15 forest service personnel. The lagoon system will handle this facility and the 2,000 gallon holding tank which is metered into the lagoons to prevent any septic action.

Pestotnik said a lagoon system is planned at the Red Fish Lake recreation area where it will serve forest service installations and provide a dumping station for campers and trailers using that scenic area campgrounds.

This is the first major step by Sawtooth officials toward pollution abatement involving sewage disposal, officials said.

'Pre-cooled' bulbs-good trick

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
GROWING BULBS IN POTS: Many home gardeners are resorting to a trick used by commercial florists — buying "pre-cooled" bulbs for forcing indoors.

Pre-cooled bulbs are bulbs which have been given the special low temperature treatment needed for forcing.

The old fashioned method of growing tulips, daffodils or hyacinths in pots was to pot them up and bury them in a coldframe outdoors where they would undergo the cold treatment for 10 or 12 weeks.

By using the pre-cooled bulbs you don't have to bury them outside. Just pot them up and keep them watered.

Pre-cooled bulbs planted the first-of-November will make blooms for Christmas. Another planting in mid-November will give you later blooms. For still-later blooms, a third planting during late December or January is in order.

The time it takes to force bulbs into blooms varies with bulbs, growing conditions and care, but the approximate time is around 9 to 10 weeks.

If you can't buy the pre-cooled bulbs from your garden center, you can still grow the regular kind. Place the bulbs in a plastic bag and keep in the crisper of your refrigerator for 8 weeks or so. Then pot them up in a soil mixture of 1 part each of sand, peat and loam.

ROOTING IMPATIENS: Home gardeners tell us they have a hard time rooting Impatiens or Day plants. Sometimes they root fast, sometimes they rot before they root. Try rooting yours in boiled water, cooled of course.

A few pieces of charcoal in the water helps to keep it sweet. Impatiens root better in a window without direct sun. A bright, sunless window is best for this shade lover.

The place where you make the cut on the stem is not important. Roots will form anywhere on the stem. Aphids and red spider mites are often troublesome on Impatiens. Wash them off with soap and water.

INDOOR PARSLEY: Don't forget to pot up some parsley and bring indoors for your winter supply. All it needs is a bright window and a uniform supply of water.

If you don't have any parsley in the garden, sow some seed in a 6 inch pot, or use your window box for parsley and other herbs. Parsley seed is slow to germinate — may take 5 weeks or so.

You can hasten germination by soaking the seed in warm water for 24 hours, then planting it in a loose soil mixture.

That empty window box can be useful for growing basil, oregano, summer savory and dozens of other herbs useful during the winter months. Nearly all these items grow in bright window, and a loose soil.

ENGLISH IVY: This handsome vine is grown outdoors and indoors. It's an evergreen vine for the south as well as for the north or west. Hedera Helix or English Ivy is easy to grow, and it is highly variable in color and leaf form.

You see it growing on tree trunks, and clinging to walls by means of rootlike holdfasts. One variety has leaves which are variegated creamy yellow. The hardiest form of English Ivy is Hedera helix baltica.

Indoors English ivy likes an average potting mixture (1 part each of sand, peat and loam). Some people grow them well in plain tap water, adding a few pieces of charcoal.

When it comes to light, the English ivy grows fine in shade or sun outdoors. Indoors it likes dappled shade in summer and full sun in winter.

There's a trick to watering the English Ivy. Allow the soil to get a bit dry between waterings. Give the plant a good soaking each time you water.

Grow in clay pots for best effect. Syringe the foliage frequently especially if the room is hot and dry.

TROUBLES: Shriveling and drying up of leaves is due to overwatering or poor drainage. Ivy growing in glazed containers are often overwatered and that's the main reason why the leaves dry up.

Mottled foliage is due to red spider mites, and it's often worse when the soil is dry as a bone. White cotton masses on stems means mealybug. Handpick and burn, or scrub affected parts with toothbrush and soapy water. Washing the foliage will get rid of red spider mites.

Indoors, feed your English ivy with liquid plant food once every 3 to 4 weeks or so, in summer. In winter, growth is slower, so feed every 3 months. Watch out for the dry fertilizers as they may burn the roots.

Starting new plants is easy. Slip off tips and place in jars of plain tap water. Rooting takes place in 4 or 5 weeks. Some gardeners feel that green glass containers are best for rooting and growing this ivy. You get quickest rooting in spring months, and slowest in winter.

Some feel that you get a better root system if the cutting is started in moist sand, or in sand-peat mixture.

Whatever you use, do not let the mixture dry out completely at any time, or the cutting will die. Pot them up in a 5 inch pot after roots are formed.

QUESTION BOX
QUESTION OF THE WEEK: E. D. of Twin Falls: "We have a stump in our backyard—and—wonder if we could make it rot fast with some kind of a chemical. That's the best way to handle it?"

Here are a few suggestions for handling a stump:

(1) Grow vines such as morning glory around it, and see how nicely the vines hide the stump.

(2) Fill a hanging basket with geraniums, petunias, etc.

(3) Go to the woods and get shallow dish of moist soil, some rotted woods' earth. Scatter some of this on top of the stump to inoculate it with bacteria and fungi. These organisms go to work on the stump and help break it down faster.

(4) If the stump is an eye sore then you may want to hire the services of a tree company which uses a de-stumper to get rid of the entire stump in a short time.

(5) If local laws permit, try burning the stump, using saltpeter and paraffin oil. Bore a hole 2 inches in diameter and 18 inches deep, put in 1/2 ounces of saltpeter (potassium nitrate), with water and plug up tight.

In about 6 months, put in the same hole a half pint of kerosene (also called paraffin oil), then light. The stump should smolder away without blazing, down to every part of the root.

If the stump is very large, make two holes and follow the same procedures.

E. R. of Shoshone: "Please tell me how to care for a plant given to us as a house-warming gift. The label reads 'Aechmea fasciata' and it said to keep the soil moist and to keep water in the cups of the plant. What does that mean?"

The common name for your plant is 'living vase' plant because the leaf rosettes are vase-like and have the ability to hold water. Aechmea (pronounced 'eek-me-uh') is a member of the pineapple family.

Keep the "vases" or cups filled with water as often as is needed because that's the way these plants like to be watered. Provide a light to semisun window, and a temperature of 72 degrees or so.

Soil can be 1 part each of sand, loam and shredded bark, or coarse leaf mold. Water the roots very little. Keep the vases filled with water and the plant should thrive.

If you want to start new "living vases" remove some offsets from the parent plant and pot them up in the above soil mixture.

While you're at it, try growing a real pineapple for the fruit and foliage effect. Slice off the top of a fresh pineapple and plant it in a shallow dish of moist soil. Watch it form roots (takes about 2 months or so), and then pot it up.

Homecoming
rebroadcast

The Gossip Column

Q: My cousin tells me that our great Senator Howard Baker is writing an expose novel about Washington. I just don't believe this. — A. A., Chattanooga, Tenn.

A: Senator Baker is writing a novel, but not a scandalous

Q: What happens at diplomatic functions if representatives of two warring countries should meet? I'm thinking of the Israelis and the Arabs in posts outside the Middle East. — L. G., Waco, Texas through the late actor's files or the boxes and boxes of Gable memorabilia she inherited.

Q: How is Pat Nixon bearing up under her husband's political woes? — G. G., Bethesda, Md.

A: Nobody except her immediate family knows, and perhaps not even they. Remember what she told Gloria Steinem a few years ago: "I hold everything in. I never scream. If I have a headache no one knows and if I were dying I wouldn't let anyone know." Mrs. Nixon learned very early to be stoic and to deal with tragedy. She nursed her mother until she died of cancer when Pat was 12. Her father died soon after that.

Q: I saw Jim Stacey on a TV show last night. He looked OK to me. I'd heard he was seriously injured in a car wreck. — T. J., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Obviously the film was made some time ago. Stacy was knocked off his motorcycle in Beverly Hills in an accident where police concede the actor was not in the wrong. He lost his arm and a leg and is now suing the driver of the car that hit him for $20,000,000. Stacy is in rehabilitation and friends say he is determined to recover and make a career comeback.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Do movie stars have to carry their own bags? Not if they're like Dean Martin, Dino, a brand-new husband these days, has just gone back for a new plastic eyelift job — his second.

Q: Is it true that Tricia Nixon Cox is pregnant? — J. D., Wilmington, Del.

A: The rumor is around that President Nixon's older daughter is expecting. A grandchild might make the President happier about Tricia's marriage. It is said the Chief Executive can't stand his son-in-law, Edward Cox, and refuses even to be alone in the same room with him.

Q: Is it true that Agatha Christie has quit writing her great mystery stories? — H. G., San Jose, Calif.

A: No, the 83-year-old writer is still grinding them out at the rate of one a year. Dame Agatha, who lives in near seclusion with her husband, has also just published a book of rather sexy love poems. Her autobiography, which is written but won't be published until after her death, is rumored to make very lively reading.

QUICKIES: Tatum O'Neal is only nine years old but since starring with her daddy Ryan in "Paper Moon," she has developed an ulcer ... Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti are abdinating a fortune to an enormous clinic between Lausanne and Geneva to prove that Swiss medicine is better than Italian ... Robin Moore, who wrote "The Green Berets" and "The Happy Hooker," has been talking to Spiro Agnew about "movie rights" to the former V.P.'s "personal" story ... The Duchess of Windsor refused to be seated at a Paris dinner party where she had not been given the place of honor. After her host and hostess moved Princess Barbara of Liechtenstein (only a Serene Highness) to second place, the Duchess finally agreed to sit.

Q: Is the man who wrote the best-selling "Joy of Sex" an American? What is his name and how old is he? — V. T., Philadelphia, Pa.

A: You refer to Dr. Alex Comfort, a 53-year-old once-divorced Englishman, now remarried. Having been offered a chair in gerontology (the science of aging) at Santa Barbara, the best-selling author recently bought a house in California.

Q: Are Sally Ann Howes and Broadway composer Dick Adler still married? — J. E., New York, N. Y.

A: No, they divorced in 1966 though she continues to look after his two sons from a previous marriage. Sally Ann adopted them. The 43-year-old actress-singer has been divorced three times. She was rumors that actress Liv Ullmann will go back to Ingmar Bergman, the father of her child? — E. B., Quincy, Mass.

A: A reconciliation is unlikely. Meanwhile Liv, who is in Naples doing a movie, is getting regular overseas phone calls from both David Frost and Dr. Henry Kissinger, who, she says, "is the most interesting man I have ever met."

Q: I saw the film about the RFK assassination. Was there really a second gun or killer besides Sirhan Sirhan? — J. E., New York City.

A: Many people think so and are as dissatisfied with that investigation as they are upset over President Kennedy's death and the Warren Report. Rumors in California are that the Robert Kennedy murder case may be reopened for an examination of new—and old evidence.

one. It is autobiographical and tells how a young Senator acquires political know-how. It also deals with the people who helped him, particularly an older Senator in Washington. We hear the older Senator is a cross between Sam and Baker's late father-in-law, Senator Everett Dirksen. Senator Baker has signed a contract with Doubleday, which gave him a $100,000 advance for the novel and for a non-fiction book of profiles.

Q: Has Frank Sinatra any grandchildren? There's a bet on this. I say yes. My wife says no.

— H. P., Ft. Worth, Texas.

A: Sinatra, 55, will become a grandfather next April when his eldest, twice-wed daughter, Nancy, 33, and her producer-choreographer husband, Hugh Lambert, expect a baby.

PRESIDENTIAL ADVISER
BIT: The U. S. isn't the only country to have them. Guineen's President Sekou Toure has a donkey for an adviser. The ass is consulted each morning and happy bray signifies a positive answer to the day's questions. When the donkey remains silent, President Toure turns down all proposals. (Probably works as well as anything else.)

Q: I saw Sir Laurence Olivier doing a camera commercial recently and he was wonderful. I heard he was ill. Was the commercial done sometime ago? — H. V., Bristol, Va.

A: Olivier, who is 66, is in excellent health, having overcome cancer some years back. As a matter of fact, he was attacked by a burglar in his London home recently and scared him off by yelling in his best Henry V voice and threatening the thief with a heavy bronze acting award. The thief got in a few karate blows ... which bruised Sir Laurence and broke his glasses before the actor frightened him

Q: None of the Arab countries have had diplomatic relations with Israel since the country was founded in 1948. Generally they don't attend the same functions and we hear that, in the rare instance when representatives of the two countries are in the same room, the Arabs always turn away and never talk or shake hands.

Q: Practically every movie star has a book written about him, so why hasn't anyone done the love of my life, Clark Gable? — F. H., Paterson, N. J.

A: There is one book, not strictly a biography, entitled "Clark Gable." There are, however, two more books in the works for possible publication next year. Kay Spreckels Gable, his widow and the mother of his son, has finally decided to do one herself and she has asked all her Hollywood pals not to talk for publication to anyone but her, and has also refused to allow other writers to poke married-to-actor Max Coker (1950) for six years and her third husband was Morgan Marce III. (They parted three years ago.) Sally Ann had a tragic romance with actor Jeff Hunter, who died of injuries sustained in a fall in 1969. Now she is seeing urban London agent Douglas Rae and friends are predicting a fourth marriage.

Q: I know that Stewart Brand, who published the "Whole Earth Catalogue," quit publishing the catalogues forever a couple of years ago. What's he doing now? — Y. C., Buffalo, N. Y.

A: Well, he sort of changed his mind and the "Last Whole Earth Catalogue" isn't quite that. Come next year, Brand will unveil his latest: "Whole Earth Epilog."
